Bill Freeing 5 Billions for Arms Goes To Roosevelt

House Votes Down Cut in Conscription Age Limit, Refuses To Alter Exemptions

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Congress completed action on the last big defense supply bill yesterday, releasing $5,251,486,392 for planes, warships and guns, as the House beat down an effort to lower the maximum draft age from 44 to 30.

Voting down a barrage of other amendments, the House successively refused to remove exemptions applying to aliens, college students and members of Congress. The action on the latter two proposals brought cries of "rich men's bill" from opponents.

Under pressure of leaders, consideration of major sections was completed, and a final vote is hoped for tonight.

Ready for Signing

The big supplemental defense bill was sent to the White House after the Senate had approved a conference report. With President Roosevelt's signature, money for 18,422 planes, 200 warships and arms for 1,200,000 men will become available.

Before voting on passage of the draft bill, the House faces a long fight on the adoption of a "draft industry" amendment, and reconsideration of the tentative action taken Thursday for a 60-day deferment of conscripiton pending a trial of voluntary enlistments.

From President Roosevelt yesterday came the chiding—tempus fugit (time flies)—when asked for comment on the House vote for a trial of the voluntary system before putting conscription into effect.

Leaders hope to defeat the amendment on a record vote, as they predict its only effect would be to stall off conscription until after the election, a position which Congressmen up before the voters might hesitate to take on an aye and nay tally.

Health Guard Set Up

Only once yesterday did the House override its Military Committee. It approved, 115-95, an amendment offered by Representative Austin (Republican), of Connecticut, to bar the induction of any men until adequate housing facilities are provided.

"No such induction shall take place," the Austin amendment provides, "until adequate housing is provided; the term housing to include sanitary facilities, adequate water supply, heating and lighting systems, medical care and hospital accommodations such as are generally accepted by the U. S. Public Health Service as essential to public and personal health."

New Ambassador Of France Denies He Is Pro-German

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Gaston Henry-Haye, new French Ambassador to the United States, arrived aboard the Yankee Clipper today and denied emphatically that he was pro-Nazi.

"I wear no shirt but this white one, just as white as I can keep it," he told reporters.

This was his answer to signs carried by pickets at LaGuardia Field protesting his appointment on the ground that the representative of the new French regime was a "stooge" for the German government.

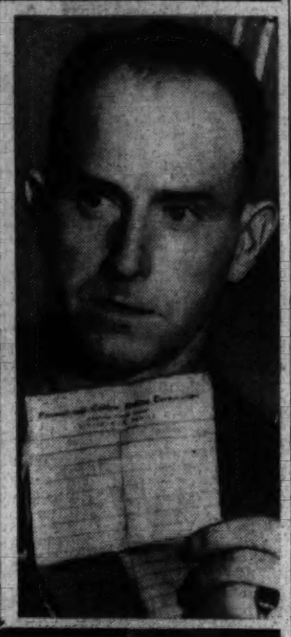
Then He Heard 'A Terrible Noise'

Witness Tells How Airliner Turned Back Before Crash

Aeronautics Board Hears Virginia Farm Folk Tell of Tragedy



Capt. Lowell V. Scroggins, who died with 24 others when the airliner he was piloting crashed near Lovettsville, Va., last Saturday, may have endeavored to turn back from the terrific thunderstorm in which it went down, an eyewitness said yesterday.

Charles William Bailey, who lives across Short Hill from Lovettsville, told the Civil Aeronautics Board at a hearing in the departmental auditorium yesterday he saw the plane fly across the mountain, turn sharply back eastward, then disappear behind trees topping the ridge.

A few seconds later, he said, he heard "a terrible noise, but I didn't know what it was." The plane, he said, had its landing gear down.

Questions of board members and their technical advisers indicated they suspected Bailey might have seen another plane. An Army ship of similar design was believed to have been flying in the vicinity about the time of the crash.

A dozen farmers who were threshing wheat in a field a mile and a quarter from the crash, testified to seeing their employer, Ernest Graham, catch an envelope fluttering down in the air a few minutes after they heard the roar of the plane silenced by a tremendous crash. The envelope, placed in evidence, was charred along its flap and one edge. It was said by officials of the Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, whose plane was lost, to be used for carrying tickets between offices of the line.

Graham told the board he was standing in his barn where he and

Profit Tax Bill Changes Urged

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Changes in the excess-profits tax bill that would increase the normal corporation levy to a maximum of 24 per cent and would raise the yield to $485,000,000 the first year were tentatively approved yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee.

In addition to boosting estimated revenue, the committee also emphasized the excess-profits tax feature of the bill by voting to impose a special 10 per cent tax on that portion of net income derived from national defense or war contracts.

Furthermore, the committee decided to abolish the 4.1 per cent "penalty tax" and also a 5 per cent rate differential, both of which served to penalize those corporations choosing the average-earnings method of calculating their excess profits.

Provision for permissive filing of consolidated returns, for special relief of "hardship cases" and for further liberalizing of the amortization section of the bill were agreed on.

Declaring that the committee would continue its consideration of the bill today, Chairman Harrison indicated that he hoped to present the measure to the Senate early next week.

The alterations agreed on yester-

Willkie Calls Destroyer Deal 'Dictatorial'

'Quiet Deliberation'

By William B. Arderv

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 6.—Declaring he was speaking "with quiet deliberation," Wendell L. Willkie declared today the Administration's agreement to trade 50 over-age destroyers for British air and naval bases was "the most dictatorial act of any President in the history of the United States."

Speaking to a group of farm editors and radio commentators, the Republican Presidential nominee said he was "leaving out of account the advantage or disadvantage of the trade."

"I say that," Willkie declared, "because in the solution of all our problems—farm, economic and national defense—it does no good to solve them if we solve them in the manner of the dictators or if in their solution we wave aside our great constituitional and democratic system.

Storm Over Argentine Meat Revived

Roosevelt Alleged To Have Promised Action on Its Entry 'After Election'

Western Congressmen who oppose the importation of Argentine meat were stirred to strong protests last night by a speech in Buenos Aires purporting to quote President Roosevelt and predicting the question would be "solved" after the November elections.

Expressions of incredulity and warning followed an address to the American Chamber of Commerce in the Argentine capital by Dr. Leopoldo Melo, chairman of the Argentine delegation to the Pan-American conference in Havana.

Melo said that in an interview with the President at Hyde Park a few weeks ago, Mr. Roosevelt left him with hopes that a sanitary convention permitting the entry of Argentine lamb and mutton into the United States would be approved by the Senate after the election.

"Going to Be Indiscreet"

"I am going to be indiscreet," said Melo. "Mr. Roosevelt told me that the present hour of political struggle is not propitious to raise this issue because some Western Senators are possibly more inclined to listen to the aspirations of their voters than to the facts of the case as explained by the President."

The issue that has torn Western Democratic ranks, held up reciprocal trade negotiations with Argentina, and once created a political tempest over Navy purchases of Argentine canned beef, broke again to the surface at the Capitol.

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, one of those who fought a trade agreement with Argentina, said he feared the speech would become "a red-hot political issue in the West."

"The whole West is concerned with the threat to bring in Argentine meat in competition with our own produce," said Johnson. "Congress will never agree to it."

Adams Doubts Story

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, said he didn't think the President was correctly quoted by Melo.

"I don't think Mr. Roosevelt said it," said Adams. "I will venture to predict he will say he has been misquoted."

Adams said there is no field for a trade understanding with Argentina on meats, wheat or other farm products which this country produces in quantity.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, who last year fought proposed tariff slashes on Argentine canned beef and other meat products, said regardless of what Melo said, the issue is not likely to arise.

The nonratified sanitary convention, which would relax restrictions against entry of Argentine meat,

Roosevelt Leaves For Hyde Park; To Pray Sunday

President Roosevelt left last night for a week-end vacation at his Hyde Park, N. Y., estate, but will be back at his White House desk Monday or Tuesday.

Discussing his plans during his morning press conference, the President said he did not contemplate any defense inspection tours on this trip, and had no plans for delivering a speech at Chicago this fall.

He revealed he would attend services this Sunday—the day he has proclaimed as one for prayers for world peace—at St. James Episcopal Church in Hyde Park.

Crusading Park Policeman Faints at Mass Vagrant Trial

Bernard J. Beckmann, crusading park policeman, collapsed in Police Court yesterday at the outset of the mass trials of 54 vagrants arrested Wednesday for sleeping in District parks.

He was stricken with nervous prostration a few minutes after receiving a reprimand from Judge John P. McMahon when he was unable to answer the judge's questions against the first defendant.

Court attaches took Beckmann to the first-aid room at the courthouse, where he slept for nearly two hours.

Overwork in preparing the cases against the floaters was blamed for the policeman's condition. His family said he had only a few hours sleep since Wednesday morning, when he staged the raids which netted 77 outdoor slumberers.

Judge McMahon instructed the policeman to "present only the cases you've prepared."

As a result Beckmann decided to nolle prosse the charge against two of the 28 men brought to trial.

When Beckmann collapsed, his partner, Policeman A. J. Bickford, was called upon to pinch hit for the ill policeman in 26 cases.

Judge Casey convicted all of the men but suspended $10 fines in all but seven of the cases.

Among the defendants was Freddie Hill, colored, a pinboy whom Judge Casey recognized as having set pins for him at a Connecticut avenue bowling alley. A $10 fine was suspended.

Most of the defendants told the court they had just stopped to rest before going to work.

Great Swarms of Nazi Raiders Pound Britain; Waves of R.A.F. Planes Hit Back at Berlin, Ruhr

English Fight Off Nazi Pursuit Ships to Reach German Capital

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Saturday), Sept. 7.—Strings of British bombers raided Berlin and vicinity early today for nearly three hours, starting several fires and killing at least two civilians and a number of soldiers.

The raiders crossed into Germany in waves, it was stated, and the raid on the capital became the most spectacular of the war.

The attack was characterized by low-flying planes and the thundering of bursting bombs, augmented by heavy fire from antiaircraft defenses.

The attack on Berlin was centered on the north side.

Shell fragments from antiaircraft fire pattered Berlin roofs in all sections.

It was revealed the raiders were harried by pursuit planes which chased them across German territory.

It was said that the invading planes were confused and obliged to go to a great height and make long detours to avoid barrage balloons raised in a surprise defense.

Cross Over Holland

Spokesmen said the invading planes crossed the Dutch border in a succession of waves, part of which went into the Ruhr and part continuing eastward to Berlin.

They dropped numerous flares over Berlin, Spandau and Potsdam. Defense fire drove some planes back from the vicinity of Potsdam.

Several fires were started in workers' residential quarters of Berlin, authorized spokesmen said. The blazes were visible from downtown Berlin.

The spokesman also reported damage to buildings in two places as a result of what they called "planless" British bombings.

One bomber was reported badly damaged by a German pursuit ship. The spokesman said the bomber was caught in a searchlight beam, and the light crew distinctly saw one Englishman leap out with a parachute.

It was estimated a dozen raiders

Deal for Pacific Bases Denied

By George Bookman.
Post Staff Writer

There are no negotiations in progress to plug the Pacific "back door" of the Panama Canal by acquiring military base rights on Cocos Island and the Galapagos Islands, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

While issuing an assurance that Costa Rica and Ecuador, respective owners of the strategic islands, are in complete cooperation with the United States on defense of the Americas, the Chief Executive declared that there are no further negotiations for bases going on of any nature anywhere.

The White House statement followed an offer made public through the press Thursday by President Calderon Guardia, of Costa Rica, to lease tiny Cocos Island, about 600 miles northwest of the Big Ditch, to the United States. Calderon Guardia said yesterday, after President Roosevelt's press conference, that no negotiations regarding Cocos were under way.

Islands Not Suitable

The President's flat statement regarding base negotiations also confirmed reports, published in The Post Thursday, that Germany's conquest of Denmark, Holland and France bar the United States for the present from taking over mili-

Carol Gone, Dictator Lines Up Rumania at Side of Axis

New Riots Reported; Scores of Monarch's Backers Arrested

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Rumania, Sept. 6.—King Carol II, undone by his enemies at last, was driven from the throne of Rumania today and cast into a dull pensioner's exile with the fading beauty, Magda Lupescu.

His 18-year-old son, Prince Mihai, took over the now empty title of monarch—a sovereign only in name, ruling by grace of Rumania's tough old military dictator, Gen. Ion Antonescu.

Carol, who for ten years had made harsh, decisive use of the powers of a real king to live down his youthful reputation as a man more fond of parties than politics, abdicated at dawn and crept out of the country aboard his yacht, to which Madame Lupescu already was understood to have fled.

[Bloody riots in the streets of Bucharest broke out anew tonight, resulting from angry demands by extremist mobs for the capture and execution of Carol and for vengeance against enemies of the Iron Guard, International News Service reported.

[Three demonstrators were killed and many wounded when troops opened machine gun fire on a crowd that stormed and attempted to burn the home of former Premier General Argetoianu who has been placed under "house arrest."]

Where Carol and his mistress would go none knew precisely—perhaps to Egypt, perhaps eventually to Switzerland or the United States. He was given an allowance in English pounds worth about $60,000 a year.

Japanese Ministers Decide To Disregard Stand of U. S.

Scrap Steel Embargo Likely to Be Invoked Against Tokyo

By Frank L. Kluckhohn
Copyright by New York Times

A complete embargo on the export of steel scrap appeared likely last night after it was revealed that the National Advisory Defense Commission soon will recommend such an embargo to the President.

Officials said the Defense Commission decided that all steel scrap was necessary for the domestic armaments program. Although it was reported that the commission had acted on the request of the State Department, officials denied this and said that the matter had yet to be ruled on finally by diplomatic officials.

A licensing system for the export of steel and iron scrap was put into effect several months ago when the defense program got under way, but this has not proved sufficient, official sources said. Japan, it was understood, would be one of the chief sufferers from a complete embargo on scrap such as that now applying to aviation gasoline.

Japan Depends on United States

In 1939, the United States shipped Japan steel and iron scrap valued at $32,592,500, or 91.01 per cent of all that Japan imported. With only limited sources of such material at her own disposal, Japan is virtually dependent on the United States for its supply since other major manu-

Plans for Indo-China Determined, Despite America and Britain

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Sept. 6.—The key ministers of Japan were represented tonight as having decided to reject the official stands of both the United States and Great Britain, calling Japan's attention to the interest of these powers in seeing French Indo-China untouched.

Authority for the statement that the representations and statements would be rejected—either by explicitly turning them down or by ignoring them—was the newspaper Kukomin, an organ of the dominant army faction. It said the decision was reached at a conference of Premier Konoye and the ministers for war, navy and foreign affairs.

The foreign office spokesman, Yakichiro Suma, said the government was not stating any official attitude toward the declaration of Secretary Hull, two days ago, that the effect of American public opinion would be "unfortunate" if Japan flouted the status quo of Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies.

"Peaceful Processes"

Suma added, however, that the United States had no cause for alarm over Indo-China and that Maj. Gen. Issaku Nishihara, Japan's representative in Indo-China, was authorized to negotiate with the French colonial authorities there concerning "peaceful processes."

Episode of the War at Sea

British Sub Saves Prisoners As Nazis Scuttle Prize Ship

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 6.—The admiralty announced tonight that the British submarine Truant had rescued the crew of a British merchant ship and a party of Norwegian sailors from a German prize crew which had captured the ship.

The rescue was effected off Cap Finisterre, northwestern corner of Spain. The British were the crew of 24 of the 5,207-ton steamer Haxby, who were imprisoned aboard the 5,781-ton Norwegian steamer, Tropic Sea, which the Germans were sailing to Germany.

The Haxby had been torpedoed and sunk and the Tropic Sea captured by a German surface raider.

After the Truant's rescue all of the Britons and some of the Norwegians were brought to England. The Germans and the other Norwegians were left in the ship's boats.

When the Truant ordered the Tropic Sea to stop the ship was scuttled by the German prize crew "by means of explosive charges which were kept ready and in position," the admiralty announcement said.

The Germans and the British and Norwegian prisoners took to the boats and the Truant picked up the 24 British seamen, the Norwegian captain of the Tropic Sea and his wife. The others had to be left at sea because the submarine could accommodate no more.

Seaplanes were sent to rescue those in the boats and brought one boatload to England.

"It is probable," the admiralty said, "that the other boats reached land."

Hell in the Dark

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Sept. 7.—Hitler's raiders splashed pitch-black London with a chain of blinding flares and bombs last night and early today, carrying around the clock their mightiest raids yet on the heart of this island fortress.

At 1:01 a. m., today, the grateful, steady shriek of the "all clear" ended the sixth raid since Friday morning. This alarm lasted an hour and 28 minutes.

Three scream bombs were dropped just before the fifth raid ended—and a whistling bomb heralded the presence of the enemy in the sixth alarm.

Antiaircraft guns blazed away at the Germans.

Throughout the night the Nazi raiders ranged over England, stabbing at scattered objectives. Before dawn one group of planes struck heavily at a northwest coastal district, dropping a number of bombs.

Shelter Almost Hit

German bombers struck at one of the London districts thus far untouched by the raiders, dropping high explosive and incendiary bombs. One bomb exploded near the entrance of an underground public shelter but none of the several hundred occupants was injured.

Fires from Nazi incendiary bombs still burned brightly in the

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Tokyo (Saturday), Sept. 7.—Dr. Gerhard Alois Westrick, Hitler's special emissary to American business, who left the United States suddenly after disclosure of his activities, arrived in Japan with his wife and two sons on the steamer Nitta Maru from San Francisco, yesterday, presumably en route to Germany by way of Siberia.

They were accompanied by Baroness Irmingard von Wagenheim, whose name figured on the passenger list simply as "Miss I. Wagenheim."

Passengers who made the crossing on the Nitta Maru said the Westrick party stuck closely together on the trip without mingling with other passengers. There were said to be a large number of Germans in the Westrick entourage whose names could not be learned.

G. O. P. to Control House With 12 Seats to Spare, Martin Predicts

National Chairman Expects Increase Of 60 Members

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Revising G. O. P. Congressional surveys, Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., said last night that, come what may in November, Republicans will pick up a minimum of 60 House seats.

That is an even dozen more than needed for Republicans to reorganize the House, take over control of committees and ensconce Minority Leader Martin as Speaker of the first Republican House in ten years.

Speaker Bankhead, who must step down from the rostrum if Republicans take over, was moderately skeptical.

"This is the claiming period," said Bankhead. "I could make some claims, too, but I won't. Anything is possible in the next two months. But I think it is safe to assume that House Democrats will remain in control."

Figures Based on Survey

Martin said he based his forecast on surveys personally made on his recent trip cross-country and on analyses by Representative Ditter, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee.

He said he believed a gain of 75 seats was more likely, and the figure will go higher if Wendell L. Willkie "wins by a landslide."

Characterizing reports that Willkie has lost ground as "Washington propaganda," Martin said in his opinion "the campaign is already over and Willkie is in." He said he has prepared a State-by-State survey bearing out the forecast that "he will win by a sweep and carry the East just as strongly as the West."

Speaker Bankhead, whose Senatorial brother left for Birmingham Thursday to open Southeastern Democratic campaign headquarters, said he had failed to note any Willkie progress.

Democrats Unimpressed

"It is too early for anything but guesses at this stage of the game, but it is my opinion that Mr. Willkie has made no headway since his acceptance speech," said Bankhead.

As for the Republican forecast that the G. O. P. would organize the next House, Bankhead said "they will have to win at least 47 new seats to do it, and I don't think it can be done." He said canvasses by Representative Drewry, of Virginia, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, indicated Democrats would have no difficulty in retaining House control "and may even gain some seats."

In other Democratic quarters, it was conceded that the West is "close" and much field work must be done, particularly in the Middle West, to meet the Willkie strength there.

Midwest Is Battle Ground

Republicans have been counting such Middle and Far Western States, as Ohio, Indiana, Kansas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Colorado and Idaho, as "in the bag."

Overtures are expected to be made to Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California, who recently swept the California primaries, to make a speech for Willkie in that State. Johnson has never declared himself on candidates. Republicans list California as "close."

Also rated as "close" is Illinois, where Democratic Vice Presidential Nominee Henry A. Wallace has been stumping to overcome pro-Willkie sentiment among farmers. Indicating the importance attached by the Democrats to the Midwest test, Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee has been assigned to accompany Wallace. Jones returned yesterday for the House final round on the conscription bill, but will go West again to accompany Wallace through Nebraska and Minnesota.

Isolationist Bloc Continues Silence On Destroyer Deal

The thunderous silence on the Senate floor with which the isolationist bloc has greeted President Roosevelt's destroyer-naval base deal continued unabated yesterday.

It was learned yesterday that one reason for the unwonted bashfulness of Senatorial orators is that they have been waiting for Chairman Walsh of the Naval Affairs Committee to lead the attack against transferring naval vessels to England.

However, the Massachusetts Senator yesterday declared that he was contemplating "no action." He did say—for quotation but off the Senate floor—that "I always favored the obtaining of naval and air defense bases in the Western Hemisphere but believed from the outset that the transfer of any part of our Navy was a very dangerous procedure if we really desire to avoid involvement in the European war and maintain our neutrality.

"I sincerely hope that my apprehensiveness about the serious consequences of this transaction may not be realized."

The Gallup Poll

Census Takers Missed 1.4% Of Population

Less Than One Person In 75 Not Checked, Survey Indicates

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 6.—Ever since the first United States census was concluded in 1790 statisticians have debated the question: "How accurate is the census?" In recent years statisticians have estimated that Uncle Sam's census-takers might have missed from 5 to 10 per cent of the total population.

But a new study conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion in all parts of the United States indicates for the first time in history how good a job has been done.

At regular intervals since the early days of the census last April the Institute has asked a carefully selected cross-section of the American public: "Has a Government census-taker called at your home and obtained the information for the government about you?"

With the great job of census-taking virtually completed the Institute survey indicates that less than one person in 75—actually 1.4 per cent in the Institute's cross section—were missed.

When this figure is applied to the estimated census totals for the United States, the indications are that Uncle Sam's enumerators missed only from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 persons. While a variable of such size might be enough to boost several American cities into the 100,000 or 500,000 population groups, statisticians regard it as a remarkably small error in an enterprise as far-reaching and difficult as the United States census.

Omissions Equally Spread

Nor were census omissions concentrated in any particular areas or localities, the Institute's study indicates. Such oversights as were revealed were distributed through all sections of the country, and in urban as well as rural areas.

"We've been away" . . . "nobody ever comes out this way" . . . "we just didn't see a census-man out our way" . . . there are the explanations given by typical persons who say they were missed by the census-takers.

Interestingly enough, a comparatively large number of persons (about 4 per cent) said they believed they had been missed by census enumerators, but Institute check-backs revealed that in a majority of these instances other members of the family had given the necessary information to Government canvassers.

Another and final check on the census will be made shortly by the Institute.

Roosevelt Appoints Fahy Assistant Solicitor General

A period of close Presidential attention to preelection labor problems appeared imminent yesterday as the White House sent to the Senate the nomination of Charles Fahy, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board since 1935, to be Assistant Solicitor General.

Simultaneously Dan Tobin, president of the A. F. L. Teamsters Union, announced that President Roosevelt would address the organization's annual convention in Constitution Hall Wednesday night.

The Fahy appointment and disclosure of the President's forthcoming labor speech coincided with reports that the Labor Board's membership, under fire for more than a year, is due for an early realignment.

Madden Believed on Way Out

The term of office of its chairman, J. Warren Madden, expired August 27 and no definite indication has yet come from the White House whether he will be reappointed.

Friends of Fahy believed yesterday, however, that his departure from the Labor Board presages the elimination of Madden from that agency. Madden and Fahy are close friends and Fahy is understood to be unwilling to serve the board if Madden is not an NLRB member.

Complicating the situation are persistent reports that Board Member William S. Leiserson will request to be transferred back to his old post as chairman of the Railway Mediation Board if the President retains Madden.

Smith Clings to Post

Efforts to bring about the resignation of Edwin S. Smith, an NLRB member who often votes with Madden against Leiserson, have been unavailing, it was reported in Congressional circles.

Fahy, who was appointed from New Mexico to the new Justice Department post, participated in arguing before the Supreme Court the five original NLRB cases, all of which were won by the board.

In 13 subsequent major cases, Fahy helped to win 11 victories. He and his staff have been upheld in 102 of 125 cases presented to Circuit Courts of Appeals and have successfully opposed more than 100 injunction suits seeking to restrain the NLRB on grounds of unconstitutionality.

Graduate of Georgetown

A graduate of Georgetown University of Law in 1914, Fahy was admitted to the District of Columbia bar at the age of 21. He moved to the board in 1935 from a legal position with the Interior Department.

Tobin, announcing the President's intention to address the teamsters, said that the White House had authorized the speech to be broadcast but would not officially request stations or chains to put it on the airwaves.

Willkie Says Bases Deal Is 'Arbitrary'

through the processes of democracy, then it will prove that the democratic way is not the effective way."

Willkie told the group he advocated an expression of the Administration's rural electrification program.

"I am completely in favor of the REA," said the former utilities executive. "If Congress would go along with me, I would support a plan for a revolving fund to encourage public, as well as private plants, to build additional electric lines with rates subject to Government regulation."

Willkie outlined his farm views, but declared he would be "the most pretentious man in the world" if he claimed to have the solution of the farm problem.

He said he believed, however, that agriculture would be helped by increased factory employment. The latter, he added, would develop from "wise administration of laws already on the books."

The Republican Presidential nominee also suggested farm taxation be overhauled in order that taxes be levied on the basis of a farmer's income rather than on the fixed valuation of his land.

Willkie expressed these opinions on the farm question:

1. Because of tariff walls, the farmer is forced to buy in a protected market and sell in an unprotected market. Little can be done about this situation immediately because a removal of tariff barriers would result in "economic and financial chaos."

2. The European war has whittled the American farmer's market abroad. Although this, too, is a problem that can not be settled at once, every effort should be made to increase foreign markets if peace comes to Europe.

3. Farm taxes now are based on a fixed valuation of land. A preferable system would have levies generally based on farm income so that farmers would pay lower taxes in bad years than in good ones.

4. Farm income is directly related to factory pay rolls. "A wise and just administration" of existing laws would stimulate industry and give industrial workers additional power to purchase farm products without destroying such social programs as the wage-hour and social security laws.

Willkie said he did not think "there is any man so dull as to believe that payments for the conservation of the soils should be discontinued—certainly not until the farmer has a higher income."

The nominee invited questions from the 70-odd visitors. In reply to one about the farm tenancy program he said he thought ownership of farms should be encouraged in every way consistent with national "fiscal limitations."

"The public debt (now about $45,000,000,000) is bound to be about $75,000,000,000 in the next couple or three years," Willkie said, "and anybody who doesn't believe that won't fall on the backs of the farmers is just living in a fool's paradise."

Willkie was asked whether he approved minimum-price milk marketing agreements now in effect in some Eastern States and whether that system could be extended to all farm products.

The nominee replied that while such an arrangement might be desirable for a specialized branch of agriculture, he had not made up his mind as to whether it would work generally.

If price-fixing arrangements were set up in every branch of industry and agriculture, he asserted, the national economy undoubtedly would become stagnant because "the fierceness of competition is the basis of progress."

Discussing the rural electrification program, Willkie said he had suggested before the establishment of REA that Congress set up a $100,000,000 revolving fund to finance rural power lines.

"Farmers should have cheaper electricity rates," he said, and declared these could be obtained "by more efficient management" of the present program.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn said today that Wendell L. Willkie's "change of heart on the conscription of industry amendment was purely political."

"I notice that Mr. Willkie today declared in favor of the conscription of industry as well as men," he said in a statement. "That certainly is amusing. His change of front comes right after I pointed out that the Republican platforms in 1924, 1928 and 1932 were on record in favor of such conscription.

"I might say that his first reaction was his real reaction, that is, to protect wealth. If he ever gets to Washington, that's what he'll be there doing, protecting wealth and not lives."

BANKHEAD

Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, will address a mass meeting of the Labor Nonpartisan League tomorrow at Fall River, Mass., and the annual outing of the Rhode Island State committee at Crescent Park, R. I., the following day.

Speaker Bankhead will make an address at Baltimore September 10, and Senator Pepper, of Florida, will address the Vermilion County Democratic Club September 15, at the Danville (Ill.) Fairgrounds.

Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, conceding "some truth" to a charge by Representative McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, that Republican House members differed on some points with Wendell L. Willkie, said yesterday they should be proud that "they can do their own thinking."

"What a spectacle to the people of the United States," McCormack shouted on the House floor, "the nominee supporting the foreign policy of the President and the Republican members of the House not agreeing!"

"The charge that Republicans do not support their nominee on all things bears some truth," said Hoffman, adding the remark on independent thinking.

An Open Letter to
Mr. Thomas E. Lodge, Chairman,
Alcoholic Beverage Control Board of the District of Columbia

Dear Sir: Since the hearing held at the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on Thursday, September 5th, 1940, where I appeared on behalf of Miglioretti Brothers, there have been conflicting reports regarding the purpose of the remarks which I made.

Therefore, may I make this statement to clarify the meaning of what I said at that hearing:

"We are in favor of advertising the prices in all our Embros and Castilla wine advertisements for the combined protection of the public and the retailer."

This was the sole purpose of my comments at that hearing. Any other interpretation of my statement is erroneous.

MIGLIORETTI BROTHERS.

Real Orientals—
or High-Priced Fakes

A little mystery, a good sounding sales talk and fake merchandise are all necessary to the swindling rug peddler. Believe it or not he is still at work, and daily he lands his victims right here in Washington.

Acting as if he has something to conceal he offers you his bargains. Your curiosity once excited, helps him to land you as a victim.

A "real Oriental" is offered to you for only $45; it is beautiful in appearance. "Well," says the faker, "here is your chance at a price you can afford to pay."

You buy it, you part with your money, but sooner or later comes the awakening. To your amazement and chagrin you find the rug is not an Oriental at all, in fact it is not even made of wool; it is either jute or cotton. It is a cheap imitation of an Oriental, often not worth as much as you paid for it—never was and never can be a bargain at any price. The unknown rug peddler? Disappeared.

For your protection and for the sake of your pocketbook, buy rugs from an established, reputable store or dealer.

Argentine Meat Issue Revived

has been before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for two years "and we are not going to let it come up," said the Texan.

Connally said he is convinced there is enough committee opposition to the sanitary convention to continue to block Senate ratification there.

Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, said the report, if true, "is indicative of a frame of mind that is dangerous to our agricultural economy."

"The implications may go much farther," said Wiley. "It makes me wonder if there are not a lot of pledges and world agreements that we don't know anything about, and which are being held up until after the November elections."

Wiley charged the President "has gone off on another wrong tangent, if this report is true," and said he thought the Senate should ask the Secretary of State "if there are any secret agreements pending."

Dr. Melo said in his Buenos Aires speech that the words of the President, "delivered with his habitual tone of cordial sincerity, and other well-known expressions of ranking Administration members of the Democratic Party such as Mr. Hull and Mr. Welles lead to the conviction that when the present hour of political agitation has passed the propitious moment will arrive to raise again and solve the important problem which worries our livestock breeders.

"I shall add that in my opinion, considering the psychology of the people of the United States, the issue must not be confined to negotiations between foreign offices but must be carried also to the very people through propaganda which will engender and disseminate the conviction that any possible importation of Argentine meats could not damage the producers of the United States."

Melo's references to his talk with the President were inserted extemporaneously in his prepared remarks. He said he had replied: "Oh, well, between good friends, there is no need to rush matters such as this. We can wait until after the elections."

The Argentine delegate stressed that Argentine mutton, chilled beef and corned beef must find markets in the United States if United States exports to Argentina are to increase. He said meats were an important item in Argentina's export trade which could be taken in much larger quantity by the United States without hurt to American producers.

Melo said President Roosevelt repeated assurances he had expressed on his 1936 visit to Argentina to the effect that he would do all he could personally to persuade the Senate to approve the convention.

Kronheim Lawyer Demands Probe

Denies Wholesaler Has Liquor Industry Here 'Under Thumb'

F. Joseph Donohue, attorney for Milton S. Kronheim, yesterday demanded the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board investigate allegations made against his client at a public hearing held Thursday on proposed changes in the liquor code.

Among other allegations hurled at Kronheim, a local wholesaler, Leslie Garnett, former United States attorney for the District, charged him with having the local liquor industry "under his thumb."

Donohue, in his letter dated September 6, also asked the board to probe a reference to an "undesirable influence" contained in the Eberharter Congressional report which dealt with the local liquor situation.

Will Be Referred to Seal

Thomas E. Lodge, board chairman, in a letter of reply, also dated September 6, said he would refer the matter to Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal.

In his letter Donohue stated:

"These allegations have been iterated and reiterated and have become so widespread as to cause my client considerable concern because, although he knows them to be groundless, they are still given currency and, among unthinking persons, a certain amount of credence.

"At the hearing referred to reference was made to the report of the House District subcommittee which investigated conditions in the operation of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act."

Positive Proof Lacking

This reference follows:

"With its limited powers, the committee was unable to develop positive proof of a real basis for the general feeling which undoubtedly exists that an element in the industry here exercises an undesirable influence, and is inimical to a proper administration and enforcement of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act. The element referred to is purely local in character."

Donohue said implications were sought to be made at the hearings that the report referred to Kronheim. He said the attempt was made to bolster "the very weak opposition to the program of improvement" as outlined in the proposed changes in regulations.

Kronheim and his group are indorsing the 22 changes. Garnett, appearing for Clark's, Inc., a downtown retailer, is opposed to two major changes. These would ban the use of prices in advertisements and give the board permission to control liquor prices.

Young Mihai Well-Trained to Return to the Throne

AS A BABY WITH PRINCESS HELEN

AS A BOY KING, HE RODE BICYCLE

IN 1932, AFTER FIRST REIGN

Rumania Lines Up Beside Axis

Antonescu took his hand and intoned "Sire, a prayer to God to help your majesty and me"—at once summoned his divorced mother, Princess Helen, to come and watch over him.

She arrived by airplane—from Dresden, Germany, it was understood.

A great tumult swept the streets of Bucharest for hours. The shouting celebrations led by members of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard, whose members, threatening revolution unless he yielded, had almost literally howled Carol from the throne.

Last year, after the assassination of his premier, Armand Calinescu, Carol had ordered the execution of thousands of the guardists—and they had not forgotten.

They roamed the streets, beating Jewish shopkeepers, acting as howling troops of disorder.

Arrests went forward right and left: Gen. Constantine Argetoianu, who was premier after Calinescu's death; Gen. George Milhail, chief of the Rumanian general staff; Mititza Constantinescu, a pro-British president of the national bank and former premier; dozens of other former leaders, perhaps hundreds of lesser lights.

Antonescu, holding almost unlimited power—for a proclamation to that effect was the first act of the new King, told the Rumanian press what it must do:

Stress that of her own free will Rumania was adjusting herself to the policies of Germany and Italy; try to deepen the relationship with the Axis; make no effort to hold the Axis responsible for Rumania's thin and troubled outlook; make no attacks upon Hungary, upon Bulgaria, upon Soviet Russia.

Thus, the general in effect told the country that Rumania's recent losses of territory—to Soviet Russia by ultimatum, to Hungary and Bulgaria by the orders of Germany and Italy—was something over and done with.

It seemed clear that these broad powers held by the general would be used in far-reaching programs of revenge and recrimination against those who had supported Carol's policies, and thus are now blamed for the shrinking of Rumania's frontiers.

As the hands of the police fell tonight upon many a shoulder—politicians, diplomats, industrialists accused of having grown fat in presperity—the crown council was suppressed. It formerly was the highest governing body in Rumania.

Lest any of those wanted escape the searching police, Antonescu ordered a blanket cancellation of all Rumanian passports, to halt flights from the country.

While Mihai welcomed his mother—returned to her place in the palace—tens of thousands of Rumanians swarmed the grounds, shouting hysterically.

Nothing was said about the old King—Carol.

Last night he had sat all night in the palace while Antonescu urged him over and over to abdicate. Outside, thousands of Iron Guardists screamed their contempt of him and threatened a general armed uprising.

Deserted by Head of Guards

Informed that only abdication would satisfy Horia Sima, the leader of the Iron Guard, Carol gave in when he was told that the commander of the royal bodyguard had refused to order him men to fire on the demonstrators against him.

The last favor granted to Carol, a weary man of 46 who was no longer a king, was that his proclamation turning over the throne not be issued until 9 a. m.—or, until Carol had left the country.

This is what it said:

"Very serious times have come upon my country. It's 10 years since I undertook a position of grave responsibility, becoming sovereign ruler of my country. I immediately began working with all my energy in behalf of my country, and with great love. I did everything my conscience dictated for the good of Rumania.

"Today, misfortune has come upon our country. She finds herself facing grave peril. I want to eliminate these perils by turning over to my son, whom I know you love a great deal, every chance of being king.

"I make this sacrifice to save the country. I pray God it will not be in vain. I leave to my people my precious son, and I beg all Rumanians to surround him with warm faith and complete love so he may find in them the support he needs in the difficult responsibility which from now on will rest on his shoulders.

"I pray that my country may be safeguarded by the God of my ancestors and that she may have a splendid and magnificent future."

Profits Tax Bill Changes Favored

day marked an attempt on the part of the finance committee to "unscramble" the revenue-raising from the excess-profits tax features of the bill. Several Senators and a great many witnesses had complained during the three-day hearings earlier in the week that the House bill—which to a considerable extent represented the views of the Treasury—confused an effort to obtain revenue with an effort to limit normal as well as excess profits.

To compensate for the $70,000,000 loss in revenue from abolition of the 4.1 per cent penalty tax that under the House bill would have had to be paid only by some corporations, the committee imposed a flat increase of 3.1 per cent on the normal tax of all corporations—a move designed to bring in $225,000,000 during the first year of operation.

Thus, normal corporation rates now would be: 17.95 per cent instead of 14.85 for firms with taxable income under $5,000; 19.6 per cent instead of 16.5 for firms between $5,000 and $20,000; 21.8 per cent instead of 18.7 for firms between $20,000 and $25,000, and 24 per cent instead of 20.9 for firms over $25,000.

Abolition of the 5 per cent rate differential will mean a further gain of $25,000,000 the first year. Rates for both methods of computing excess profits would not be graduated from 25 to 50 per cent.

Consequently, the total gain in income brought about by yesterday's changes is estimated at $250,000,000. Subtracting the loss of $70,000,000 resulting from abolition of the 4.1 per cent "penalty," net gain is $180,000,000.

Since the total revenue for the first year of operation had previously been estimated at $305,000,000, yesterday's alterations bring this figure to $485,000,000. Revenue for subsequent years, originally estimated at over $700,000,000, would be correspondingly increased.

No estimate could be obtained on the yield from the new 10 per cent tax on that portion of "excess profits net income" derived from war contracts. Under this provision, the tax would apply to contracts with the United States or foreign governments, and would also affect subcontractors.

Consolidated returns could, under yesterday's amendments, be filed subject to rules established by the Treasury Department. The relief provision for "hardship cases" has not yet been worked out in detail, but it would permit the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to make adjustments in abnormal situations.

Although the committee yesterday did not pass upon the amortization section of the House bill, it did decide to move up the date when the liberal amortization terms would begin to apply. Under the House measure, companies entering into contracts from July 10 to build new plants for national defense purposes could deduct 20 per cent of the cost of the new facilities from taxable income for each of the next five years. The Senate Committee yesterday acted to push the date back to January 1 in order to include some firms that made defense contracts in the winter and spring.

The House bill would have required corporations organized in the middle of the base period 1936-39 to compute excess profits by the invested capital method; but an amendment approved yesterday would allow them to use the average-earnings method if they wish.

Most of the decisions were reached yesterday by overwhelming vote of the committee. Closest tally was on the question of raising the normal corporation tax rate, which passed by vote of 11 to 8.

New Sex Hormone Described At D. C. Medical Parley

Element Called 'Testosterone' Said To Develop Male Characteristics In Subnormal Men Up to 44 Years

Men in their forties pass through the stages of young boyhood.

A detective lost his job because his voice changed and he could never again masquerade as a woman.

A man 27 years old grew an inch taller.

They all overcame inferiority complexes.

All these human phenomena were described by Dr. Samuel A. Vest, of University, Va., yesterday in a discussion of patients treated with testosterone—a sex hormone compound treating cases of subnormal developments in males.

An authority in the study of sex hormones, Dr. Vest addressed a session of the American Association for the Study of Neoplastic Diseases at the Mayflower Hotel on his treatment of sexually immature male patients.

Dr. Vest recounted and illustrated with slides how his patients changed under the influence of the compound. He said it had taken effect on men up to 44 years of age. Normal male faculties were rejuvenated, beards sprouted on skin which was formerly sallow and later became ruddy, and voices deepened, it was demonstrated.

He declared that "the subjective results of testosterone are one of its most important aspects. All my patients undergoing the treatment have overcome inferiority complexes."

Testosterone is no fountain of youth which rejuvenates senility, Dr. Vest warned. His discussion was chiefly confined to cases in which males had failed to develop sexually.

The fact that the compound can now be taken internally is the most important step of recent research in the field, he said. He pointed out that previously it was applied by hypodermic needle or by "testosterone pellets" inserted subcutaneously.

GOP Obstructs Defense Plans, Wallace Says

'Something Sinister' Hinted in Speech At DuQuoin, Ill.

By the Associated Press

Du Quoin, Ill., Sept. 6.—Henry A. Wallace, Democratic candidate for Vice President, charged today that Republicans were "obstructing" national defense and asked whether there was something "sinister behind their efforts to handicap the President."

In addresses here and in Litchfield, Wallace for the first time on his Illinois campaign tour supplemented extemporaneous remarks by reading a prepared statement dealing with the recent United States trade of over-age destroyers to Great Britain in return for air and naval bases.

"I have said the Republican Party is the party of appeasement, but it is more than that," read the prepared text. "It is the party of obstruction. It fights grimly those things that are most vital to the defense of this hemisphere.

"I believe the American people are back of the President in his trade of destroyers for naval bases from which we can keep invaders from this hemisphere. I believe the American people want those destroyers transferred. They may be the extra ounce of strength that will keep Hitler from gaining control of the Atlantic Ocean."

The candidate read excerpts from a newspaper account on a rumored move among Republican Congressmen to bring impeachment proceedings against President Roosevelt because of the destroyer trade.

"So this is what the Republicans are doing now—obstructing again and again the efforts of President Roosevelt to defend this hemisphere against the Nazi war machine," he continued.

"Are they asleep? Are they blindly partisan? Or is there something more sinister behind their efforts to handicap the President?

"Make no mistake, Hitler will not stop with Europe's inoffensive democracies. He means world domination. He has his eye on this Hemisphere with its rich fields, its vast resources which his Europe needs. He has sold so, and we must be ready.

Also for the first time on his Statewide speaking tour, Wallace charged some big business interests were not only spending money but "training traveling men to argue against the New Deal" in order to elect a Republican administration.

Wallace said New Deal opponents want "the old individualistic rights of business restored to exploit investors and workers and consumers."

"This opposition is passed down to the banks, the wholesalers and the retailers," he continued. "Money is spent to carry the word; traveling men are trained to argue against the New Deal.

"As a result, many of the small business men of this country have acquired an unreasoning hate of the Roosevelt Administration that is not based on their own experience, because most of them are more prosperous than they were in 1930, 1931 and 1932."

Protests Made To PUC on Bus Rerouting Plan

Chevy Chase Line May Be Shifted From H to I Street

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday completed public hearings on proposals to change the downtown route of the Chevy Chase bus lines with the likelihood the northern trip will proceed along I street and not H street, the present route.

The hearings began last year, and were put off until the recent widening job of I street was completed to permit the shift of bus traffic from H street to the newly widened thoroughfare.

Protests to rerouting the buses along H street were voiced by representatives of the Lafayette Hotel, Parkside Hotel and Charles Tompkins, who operates a recreation center on I street between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets.

The present route of the L-2, or Calvert street line, proceeds north on Thirteenth street, then west on H street, north on Seventeenth street, then north on Connecticut avenue and north on Eighteenth street to Calvert street and then north on Connecticut avenue to Chevy Chase Circle. The proposal is to utilize I street instead of H street in order to eliminate congestion along H street and Lower Connecticut avenue. The bus, under the new proposals would proceed west on I street to Eighteenth street and then north on Eighteenth street.

Lake Tells ABC Board He May Close Ninth Street Cafe

'Had Enough,' Proprietor Says At Hearing

Jimmie Lake yesterday told the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board "I've had enough as a night club impresario," and indicated he would close his Ninth street night club.

Appearing on charges brought against his club and his Carnation Grill, 515 Ninth street northwest, Lake defended the character of his establishment.

Following the detention by police last January of a young self-confessed prostitue, who alleged she had been served liquor in Lake's club and had "approached" men there, charges of violating the liquor code were lodged against Lake for permitting the sale to a minor, permitting the premise to be used for "immoral purposes" and "sale to an intoxicated person."

Visibly affected by the long duration of the A. B. C. case against him, which started out the early part of July, and because of sickness in his family, Lake spoke in his defense for more than an hour yesterday denying every charge brought against his establishments.

"You know," he said to the board members, "I was conceited about my place. I always maintain a good house there.

Two of his waiters, Abraham Blum and Irving Weeks, were questioned by special agents of the Department of Justice. Blum was brought into District Court on a pandering charge, but was dismissed. Lake said he discharged both men as soon as he heard about "their trouble with the FBI."

"I have never refused any charitable organization approaching me for financial aid for assistance in raising funds," Lake said.

He pointed out he had raised $5,000 for the Bonus Army, $4,000 for the Volunteers of America, $700 for the recent campaign for the Washington Boys Club and other amounts of money for welfare groups.

Permit prostitutes in his place? "I disdainfully detest them," he said. "I have a 15-year-old daughter, you know."

His attorney, James O'Shea, and the board's prosecutor, Michael Keane, will present closing arguments before the board Monday at 9 a. m.

Curran Forms Unit to Speed Appeal Cases

District Attorney Edward M. Curran yesterday established an Appeals Division to coordinate presentation of cases in the United States Court of Appeals.

Assistant District Attorney Charles B. Murray will head the new division. Assigned to his staff are Assistant District Attorneys Bernard Margolius and Dennis McCarthy, both newly appointed. Margolius was sworn in yesterday and McCarthy will take office in about two weeks.

Curran said the Appeals Division would supervise preparation of cases taken to the higher court and prepare the briefs, which frequently require skilled and extensive research. The assistsant district attorney who tried the case in the first place will cooperate in this work and argue the case before the Court of Appeals, being joined by a member of the division.

Holmes Seeks 50% Larger Cadet Corps

Reorganization of the Washington High School Cadet Corps involving a 50 per cent personnel increase and drills emphasizing combat strategy will be proposed this month by Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools.

The educator said yesterday he would offer the program at a conference with high school principals September 17.

Under his plan, the corps, which now numbers 2,033, would be expanded in a vigorous recruiting drive. The superintendent said he would urge the voluntary enlistment method rather than compulsory training, he said, but considers sory training, he said, ut considers it premature at this time.

Cutting down slightly on parading, the proposed system would embrace considerable instruction in map reading and strategy required for commanders of combat units.

Other features of the program would include arrangements for the sale of uniforms on the installment basis so that youths from low-income families would be able to participate.

The educator said his proposal was designed to prepare students for possible duty in the service branches or their academies preliminary to officers' careers in the armed forces of a "nation in danger."

Canal Strikers Told to Return Or Be Discharged

Balboa, Canal Zone, Sept. 6 (AP).—Striking laborers on the Gatun Locks projects will be allowed to return to work without prejudice, but "those who do not will be paid off and dropped from the rolls," the office of Gov. Glen Edgerton announced tonight.

The strike started yesterday when several hundred men declined to work and sought transportation to their homes in Panama.

Canal civilian authorities said an inquiry showed "no cause to believe the strike might have been fomented by persons interested in creating disorder in the Canal Zone."

Five Days of Fair Weather Predicted

Washington can expect fair weather for the next five days, according to the forecast issued last night by the Weather Bureau.

The North and Middle Atlantic States are expected to have generally fair weather, although there is likelihood of showers, mostly light, in northern New York and northern New England by Monday night or Tuesday, and in most of the area Wednesday.

The temperature will be below normal today, rising very slowly thereafter to above normal Monday to Wednesday, with a change to cooler Wednesday or Wednesday night.

Around-Clock German Raids Batter London

Many Homes Smashed As Bombers Harry City Through Night

London area when the raiders returned again at 11:33 p. m., just 22 minutes after the fifth in the day's succession of all-clears. There were several casualties in the fifth raid.

In this raid, showers of light and fire were loosed. It was a new bombing technique; a raider would drop a triple flare of three brilliant white lights strung together. While it was descending, the plane would make off to avoid the searchlights and then, when the flare was low enough to illuminate the target, would dive back over and release its bombs.

The antiaircraft batteries roared back ceaselessly.

A number of streets in one residential area were bombed. Houses were demolished and set aflame. There were casualties. Residents said the bombers set off fires with incendiaries and returned to drop high explosives upon areas already in flames.

In the sixth raid, a new fire was seen to flare up.

At times, the tin hats of midtown rooftop aircraft "spotters" could be seen for blocks away, in the brilliant light of falling parachute flares.

Up to 11:30 p. m., the air ministry said, 45 German planes had been shot down to 19 lost by the British. In the period between August 30 and September 5, it was added, 371 Nazi raiders had gone down.

During the morning, British fighter craft were declared to have shot down Germans at the rate of one every two minutes in the day's heaviest attack.

In that period, the planes came in masses of 200 and 300, in waves of 20 and 30.

The British went out to meet them, in Kent and Essex and even over the coast, and officials said they drove them off.

In a single battle in the southeast, the defenders knocked at least 34 raiders out of the sky.

People died and homes were smashed in London's suburbs—in one outlying section, bombs knocked over 40 homes in a row—and damage was acknowledged to some factory and railroad property.

[In yesterday's attacks the heaviest caliber bombs yet used by the Germans against the London area were dropped, International News Service reported. The neighborhoods that suffered the most were tenement and Jewish residential quarters, where whole blocks of tightly packed houses were wrecked.]

Officials said, however, that the airports from which London's last line of defenders spring were largely shielded from the attacks.

The London raids, swift on the heels of a 7½-hour alarm overnight, came at 4:50 a. m., at 8:48 a. m., just as the city was thronging to work; at 12:55 p. m., the lunch hour; at 5:59 p. m. and at 8:53 p. m.

Raiders and defenders, high in the blue, trailed crazy curls of white smoke for the millions to see.

[The United Press reported one German plane fashioned what looked like a letter "E" underlined. Soon it seemed that two other smoke signs were being written.

[The German bombers, racing over the London area, were seen to drop leaflets in addition to bombs.]

In the slums and prosperous areas alike the bombs fell before and after dawn. Sewers and gas mains were hit, railway communications temporarily dislocated and a shelter containing 1,000 persons torn and jarred.

Again, and all day today, the raiders used the broad pathway of the Thames, reckless of the cost.

Their numbers were impressive. This evening, for instance, more than 200 roared in from the sea. The British fighters met them head-on over the Thames Estuary and one witness said he counted five shot down in a furious melee that seemed to last only seconds.

Sections of all England felt the fury of the luftwaffe but the south bore the brunt. In one Kentish town, part of a hospital was demolished in the early morning, but doctors and nurses worked by flashlight to save the patients and one nurse, clad only in a night-dress, crawled over debris to treat injured men and women.

5 Billions Freed To Buy Arms

mum age limit for the draft to 30—that provided in the Senate-approved version of the bill—was defeated by the surprisingly wide margin of 161 to 47. In the debate, Representative Andrews, of New York, ranking minority member of the House Military Committee, said the War Department plans to call only men 21 to 30, inclusive, the first year, and in subsequent years will call only 13 per cent of the total from the 31 to 45 age group.

After the defeat of the motion, its author, Representative Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, proposed another, limiting the draft ages to 21 through 30, though registering all men, 21 through 44. This was rejected by voice vote. The result of the House action, unless reversed today, will be to leave to a joint Senate-House conference committee the determination of the age limits.

Decline to Draft Selves

On several tallies, the House upheld deferment from military service for members of Congress. An attempt by Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, to require that all male members of Congress less than 65 years old register for the draft failed, 119 to 123, on a teller vote. A few moments later Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, proposed to draft all male and female members of the same age group. This was beaten, 59 to 106.

Still later in the day, Representative Whittington (Democrat), of Mississippi, proposed to strike out the deferment of Congressmen from the draft. It was backed by the younger members of the House. Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, and Chairman Summers, of the House Judiciary Committee, called for defeat of the proposal, arguing it would subject members of Congress to the power of the Executive and endanger the freedom of the legislative branch. After defeating the proposal, 62 to 122, the House modified the exemption to permit individual members to waive their deferment.

Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, lost, 127 to 140, in an attempt to limit the deferment of college students to apply only to seniors. The exemption applies only to the current year and would defer the training only until next June.

"We have just found a storm-cellar for ourselves," Short said, "now we want to provide one for our sons and anyone who can matriculate in college, while drafting poor boys. If we let this go, we will be charged with passing a rich man's bill, and rightly so."

By a vote of 71 to 132, the House defeated a move to draft aliens who have not declared their intention to become citizens. Defeat of the motion followed a declaration of Representative Wadsworth that such action would subject our citizens abroad to draft into foreign armies.

An amendment limiting service of draftees to continental United States and possessions was beaten 118 to 70, while other proposals barring any drafted men from being sent to the Philippines, providing a further raise in soldiers' pay, granting a $200 bonus on discharge and two weeks' vacation with pay for men in service, were voted down by the House.

Not Seeking Pacific Bases—Roosevelt

tary bases on Western Hemisphere possessions of those invaded countries.

Sources close to the President revealed yesterday that one chief reason for American disinterest in the Costa Rican and Ecuadorean islands near the Canal is that, especially in the case of Cocos, the islands are not very suitable for military operations.

Cocos, these sources said, is very small, has no harbor, and rises straight out of the sea like a mountain peak. Its rugged surface affords no site for a landing field. The leeside of the island, it was said, might be used to shelter small naval vessels and planes on calm days, but at the cost of building an expensive breakwater.

President Roosevelt has made three visits to tiny Cocos Island, which was described as about 5 miles long and 2 miles wide.

The same position was taken with regard to Clipperton Island, a French possession more than 1,000 miles from the Pacific Coast of Central America. Described as hardly more than a coral atoll, Clipperton could be used for plane landings only about 100 days out of the year.

White House sources were more sanguine, however, about the defense possibilities of the Galapagos group, where better harbors exist.

Canada Talks Going Will

His attention fixed chiefly on problems of national defense during the press conference, President Roosevelt said that mutual defense negotiations with Canada are proceeding satisfactorily. The Joint Defense Board meets here Monday.

The President was emphatic in a reply he made to those who, he said, had claimed that he did not tell the truth about the destroyer deal with Great Britain at previous press conferences before the terms of the exchange were actually announced.

Bearing in mind that in mid-August he had said several times there was no connection between the destroyers and the base sites, the President declared yesterday that when all the papers are disclosed it will be found that, as of the day when those statements were made, they were true.

The President left the impression with reporters that the British had, at first, been willing to grant the base sites for nothing, but had later insisted on the 50 destroyers as a quid pro quo in making available the 99-year leases on eight Crown colonies.

Premature, He Says

The charge that he had not told the truth was a little premature, the President said.

When it was mentioned that the State Department does not publish diplomatic papers for ten years and that the destroyer papers thus could not be of much help in the coming election campaign, the President asked sharply what the campaign has to do with national defense.

Moscow Sees Long War

Moscow, Sept. 6 (AP).—America's exchange of destroyers for air and naval bases on British territory was viewed by the Soviet press today as likely to prolong the war.

The Communist Party paper Pravda said the agreement was "designed to increase British resistance to Germany and Italy. The war is now acquiring a greater scale and a more tenacious and prolonged character."

It viewed the step as a "considerable extension of Anglo-American cooperation."

Commerce Expert Says Germany's Conquests Have Helped Rather Than Hurt Her

Germany's conquests in Europe have helped, rather than hurt, her economic position, a top-ranking expert of the Commerce Department said yesterday.

The semi-official analysis, first authoritative picture of conditions inside Germany since the fall of France, stated that Germany has gained strength through resumption of coal production in the Saar Basin, improved crop conditions, and the labor of prisoners of war.

The analysis was the work of Louis Domeratzky, chief of the department's division of regional information, writing in Commerce Reports, an official periodical.

The capitulation of France, Domeratzky noted, has "relieved considerably" the Reich's position in regard to certain raw materials.

Controls Europe's Iron

Occupation of the coal mines of northern France and the iron mines of the Lorraine district were cited as instances of German gains.

"Germany now controls or has exclusive access to all important coal and iron deposits on the continent with the exception of the Soviet Union," the analysis said.

Coal production in the Saar basin, cut off when the war began in September, 1939, is resuming, Domeratzky wrote. He cited as an example of Germany's strong coal situation reports that the Reich is delivering the stipulated 1,000,000 tons of coal per month to Italy.

"The crop outlook, which earlier in the season was doubtful in many parts of Germany, because of the dry weather in May and the greater part of June," Domeratzky reported, "was improved somewhat by subsequent rains. Although results are still uncertain, an average harvest is generally forecast, since both grain and root crops are in fair condition.

630,000 Prisoners at Work

Germany's labor shortage has been alleviated by employment of at least 650,000 prisoners of war, from the Polish and Western fronts, the Commerce Department official reported.

According to figures quoted by Domeratzky, 70 to 80 per cent of the Polish prisoners in the Reich proper were working for private employers, most of them in agriculture.

On the other hand, nearly half the prisoners taken on the Western Front were working in industry, he said. In May and June, the analysis stated, 350,000 prisoners from the Western Front "found employment within the Reich."

Colored Playgrounds To Celebrate Today

All colored playgrounds in the West End area will hold their annual recreation day at 2:45 p. m. today at Francis Junior High School, Twenty-fourth and N streets northwest.

A parade will start at 2 p. m. at Briggs School Twenty-second and E streets northwest, and march to the Francis School.

The participating playgrounds are the Francis, Stevens, Briggs, Montgomery, Snows Court, Morgan, Rose Park and Wormley. An exhibition of arts and crafts will be arranged.

Liverpool, Chief Nazi Target, Slightly Damaged

By H. Taylor Henry,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Liverpool, Sept. 6.—The port of Liverpool, which handles an important proportion of all this island's wartime shipping, has been only slightly affected by repeated Nazi air raids.

Liverpool and the surrounding industrial region with some 4,000,000 inhabitants appear to have become the number one air target of England.

Industrial production has been slowed down by the raids because most factories stop work during an alarm.

I have just returned from a trip through the dock area. On a special pass, I wandered through the properties administered by the Mersey Docks and Harbor Board. The only portion for which I did not have a pass was the oil installations, but from what I could see from outside there appeared to have been no damage and work was proceeding normally.

The windows of some buildings have been shattered. I saw evidence of one hit on a dock which had slightly damaged a grain elevator. The only visible damage to shipping itself was the sinking of one small trawler by a bomb.

The port is just as busy by night as by day. Today, stevedores were loading and unloading cargo.

The port was functioning normally for wartime. I have determined that Liverpool's traffic after a year of war is some 40 to 50 per cent above the 20,000,000 tons of cargo handled in the average peacetime year.

The greatest damage in the Liverpool area has been in the outlying residential areas and industrial suburbs where a number of homes have been demolished.

The loss of life, however, appears small. Certain sources placed the number of dead in two of the heaviest air raids at 12 and 8, respectively. This is possibly due to the Liverpool habit of taking to shelter the minute the warning sounds.

More VALUE —any way you measure it!

WITH this advertisement, Buick ushers in a brand-new automobile model year.

1940 production is history—recording the greatest manufacturing and selling season our company has ever known.

You may be sure we grimly realized we had to accomplish things in our new cars for 1941 that we could count on to continue our advance.

So, on top of the $42,000,000 spent on our plants and machines these last four years we've added another $10,000,000 in new facilities.

We've dreamed and schemed the last twelve months in our experimental and engineering divisions sucking fertile brains for new ideas and new values.

We've taken our greatest all-time car and steadily and carefully brought it forward to a perfection of action, ease, goodness beyond anything ever offered under our name.

*According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, a super motor which travels with a train of explosions like the shock waves of a great projectile is called a "FIREBALL."

THE FIREBALL* DOES IT!

Modern gasolines have high octane ratings to permit higher compressions without "ping." Note how this piston, which can be used only in valve-in-head engines, rolls the fuel charge into the shape of a flattened ball that centers around the new, smaller, racing-car type spark plug. Fired at its very heart, this more highly compressed fuel lets go with such full-forced, "ping-free" wallop that any gasoline of 75 octane rating (now available at standard-fuel prices) may be used in the 115-hp. engine. Any fuel of 80 octane rating serves in the 125- and 165-hp. engines.

We honestly mean that, as you will see when you look it over—more, when you drive it—most of all, when it serves you as your very own.

It's hard to picture the new 1941 Buicks fairly with old adjectives.

Every car in all five series of the whole new line deserves unused fresh-minted language.

Stylewise, their suave and dynamic beauty refreshes the jaded eye as would sight of a hydrant in the desert.

They move and function like young wild things. They're all grace and poise and eagerness. They bring to driving and handling a keener pleasure and a new thrill.

Go see these superb new cars at your dealer's—they make plain why Buick is rightly called "exemplar of General Motors value."

Ask especially about the new micropoise-balanced FIREBALL engines—the 1941 furtherance of Buick's Dynaflash design and kingpin of all the features that make Buick the sensation of the new automobile year.

facturing nations require theirs for war purposes.

Japan must have such scrap for its war machine, experts say. For some time those most vigorously opposed to Japan's expansionist policy in China have advocated a flat embargo on shipments to Japan. Under diplomatic usage, Japan could not legitimately object to a general embargo applying to all nations, diplomats said today.

The United States, like Great Britain, has made formal representations in Tokyo against any attempt by Japan to disturb the status quo regarding French Indo-China, Secretary Hull revealed yesterday.

Hull's disclosure came within 24 hours after Lord Halifax, British foreign secretary, had announced that his government had made representations. Hull said he would not be surprised if many peaceful governments made representations in favor of preservation of the status quo.

In the face of reports that the Japanese already have completed arrangements with Indo-China to permit the passage of Japanese troops through the French colony for a campaign against the Chungking government, Secretary Hull said he was assuming that the French government was not agreeing to anything requested by Japan.

Grew Acts for U. S.

Asked to comment on rumors that Vichy is disposed to allow the Japanese armed forces to have limited rights in the French colony, Hull remarked he had nothing to add to his previous statement.

It appeared to be definite that the French would not allow Japan to use Indo-Chinese ports and bases even should permission for Japanese forces to cross the territory in trains be granted.

Turning the Tables

'R. A. F. Pilot Over Berlin' Bombs N. Y. With Furniture

Pedestrians Lose Many Years of Life Amid Crashing Chairs

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 6.—As far as police have been able to figure it out and put the pieces together, Earl McBride, an auto salesman of Dormont, Pa., was apparently playing a thrilling one-man game of "I'm an R. A. F. pilot bombing Berlin."

Through the clouds he sailed in his giant bomber. The English Channel passed beneath his wings and soon he was able to say to himself:

"Well, here I am right over Berlin . . . Bomb London, will they? Well, here's where we turn the tables."

With a hefty shove, McBride pushed the heavy object in his hands and sent it hurtling down. The minor detail that ordinarily all one has to do in a modern bomber to release the bomb is to pull a release lever didn't bother him.

A scant second later, a pedestrian at Broadway and Seventy-fifth street was almost frightened into eternity by the shock of a table crashing onto the roof of a nearby car. It was 2 a. m. (conventional bombing time).

For all that McBride knew, searchlights might have picked up his trail and the antiaircraft batteries got his range. Oblivious of such risks, he went doggedly on.

Next "bomb" was a lamp that fell crashing to the sidewalk. Then in rapid succession came phone books, suitcases, a waste basket. Occasionally McBride peered out the window of his eighth-floor hotel room to study the accuracy of his "bombing."

Soon, however, "defense forces" consisting of a police squad arrived. They found McBride in his underwear and after a thorough medical examination concluded it was simply a case of "one drink too many." McBride lost interest in "bombing" and was sent to bed.

Nazi Bombs Work Havoc in London's Slums

By Drew Middleton.
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 6 (AP).—People of the slums walked silently past bombed houses in the stifling heat.

An old man and a young woman, eyes red from weeping, stood outside one house.

"I'm not going to leave, I'm not," the old man kept saying. "I've lived here 59 years. I'm not going. They'll steal my clothes."

An air raid warden said helplessly, "I took 'em to a relief center where they have beds and food. They came right back. They won't leave."

The slums, narrower and noisier than New York's East Side, were the first stop of a three-hour tour of areas bombed last night, a tour that covered close to 100 miles and revealed only one bombing that had done military damage. Many others had inflicted damage, but not military.

The old man's house was just a shell of dirty brown stone. A bomb which had landed in the backyard had blown away doors. The ceiling had fallen in. Debris a foot deep was piled on the floor.

"I was in the shelter," the woman said suddenly. "We were there for hours. When we came back we found this. Damn them, what have we done?"

A fat baby in a carriage started to cry. The woman picked it up and stood looking at the ruined home.

A soldier led a wounded man down the street. The man's head was bound and one arm was in a sling.

"Been hurt, he has," said the soldier. "Wants to see what they done. Wouldn't believe me when I told him they hadn't touched his house."

One bomb had hit the top of an underground shelter in a square. All windows in all houses in the square had been blown out.

An air raid Warden said, "There were 1,500 people inside. Didn't touch a one."

The bomb had ploughed through the earth and concrete and opened a hole 2 feet square in the top of the shelter.

Children Are Curious

People in the square looked dazed and tired, all except the kids, who tried to shinny over the railings and see the crater.

I saw two houses near the square smashed to bits.

"They dropped six in 150 yards," a policeman said. "They didn't kill anyone but two young fools standing on top of the shelter."

Shops too poor to buy glass had been boarded up, their fronts chalked with slogans—"Britain forever, keep smiling" and "The R. A. F. will get 'em, keep your chin up."

The only damage of military value was in a suburban station. One track had been broken and workmen were mending it.

"Mister, we'll put this right before you can kiss a duck," said one workman.

The next suburb radiated wealth. It looked like Montclair or Lake Forest or Grosse Point. Bombs had demolished a house in one carefully groomed street.

Woman Knocked Out of Bed

A woman came out of the house next door. "They dropped one in the back yard," she said. "It knocked me out of bed. I don't have a shelter because I don't like to be cooped up. If I'd been in a shelter, I'd be dead."

She turned and ran back up the driveway to a 10-foot crater surrounded by hunks of muddy soil. The concussion had blown out the back of the house, covering its high, dignified interior with mud and debris.

The woman sighed, "Oh, I just pray and pray night won't come again."

We returned through the slums. A woman was standing near a bombed house. She still was in wrapper and curl papers.

She talkedwhile the neighbors gaped:

"We was in the shelter when it fell, and suddenly my John said, 'Oh, my God, where's Mrs. Simmons?'

"He rushed out and found her behind that fense there with her baby in her arms and five kids all around her, crying but not even scratched. She run out of the house into the backyard and the bomb hit the house. Ain't it the mercy of God?"

Such Sweet Compulsion

Our congratulations are extended to Officer Larry Cates of the Capitol Police, who used his head and lungs, and what seems to be his native good humor, to such excellent purpose the other night.

A thousand-odd zealots, men and women, had gathered on the Capitol grounds determined to hold an all-night demonstration against the conscription bill. The Capitol gendarmes, equally determined to prevent the demonstration, had taken a half dozen leaders of the crowd into custody, presumably as hostages for the good behavior of their followers.

The demonstrators, meantime, had been fortifying their resolution by singing "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "I Shall Not Be Moved." These hymns were calculated to increase rather than relax the tension. The captains of the gendarmerie, in fact, were at that moment considering how all these people could best be made to move backward and out of the Capitol precincts.

It was at this point that Officer Cates proposed that the demonstrators join him in singing "My Country 'Tis of Thee." This anthem, which is patriotic without being especially martial, and religious without being fanatical, was admirably chosen. After a few bars the crowd was singing it with as much enthusiasm as Officer Cates himself.

Such sweet compulsion doth in music lie, that it seems a great pity Officer Cates was not permitted to go on taming this unruly crowd into complete docility. He might have led it through song after song, gradually shifting from the patriotic into the sentimental with such favorites as "In the Evening By the Moonlight," "My Wild Irish Rose," and "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." Then at the right moment he could have introduced "Good Night, Ladies," or "There's No Place Like Home."

By this time the demonstrators might have forgotten about their demonstration. Even Col. Chesley W. Jurney, if he had joined in the singing, might have forgotten about the statute of 1882 which forbids public prayers to be offered from the steps of the Capitol without permit, as Louis XIV forbade miracles to be wrought at Port Royal.

As it was, the aid of the Metropolitan Police was invoked and after a great deal of screaming and shoving—and, some say, of pummeling and slapping—the crowd was forced to move. The demonstrators went first to the steps of the Supreme Court Building and later to the General Postoffice, where the postmaster, Mr. Burke, had the good sense to let them remain unmolested.

From the somewhat conflicting reports of what took place, it is difficult to judge whether or not the police showed as much restraint and self-control as could have been expected of them in the circumstances. All that can be said with certainty is that the whole episode has done nothing to cool the dangerous political fevers which continue to rise as the shadow of the European War lengthens.

And yet, we consider that Officer Cates made a very interesting and perhaps important contribution to police science.

Welfare Planning

Commissioner Young's belief that a central location for District welfare institutions is feasible indicates that the idea of comprehensive planning is taking hold.

The idea of grouping such institutions has, on its face, much to recommend it. Both efficiency and economy are promoted by centralization of municipal agencies having a common purpose. The necessary building program could be undertaken gradually. If a large site were acquired outside the city at a moderate price, immediate construction could be confined to those institutions most in need. Doubtless the first buildings would replace the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, where shocking deficiencies were revealed early this year.

Only the most careful study by the Board of Public Welfare and Commissioners, however, would demonstrate how many institutions could profitably be moved. The proposed Children's Receiving Home, in any event, would have to be located within the city. There is some question whether the National Training School for Girls, even though its present location is unsuitable, could be abandoned without financial loss. The District Training School at Laurel, Md., has an expensive plant which could not well be given up.

Yet, even if the plan should be found impracticable, its investigation would not be in vain. For the District's welfare institutions ought to be more closely integrated in any event. If the local authorities work out a comprehensive plan aimed to bring all of these establishments up to recognized standards, they will have a far better chance of obtaining funds to begin that work.

A Political Trick

Representative Fish's amendment would write one word in large letters across the military training bill. That word is "politics."

There is a great deal of confusion as to whether this amendment would actually delay the training of men for military service. Its supporters insist that it would not postpone by one day the actual induction of men into the Army. Registration under the draft would go forward immediately upon passage of the bill, they say, and if the number of volunteers at the end of 60 days were fewer than 400,000 conscription would be used to make up the difference.

Congressman Wadsworth, joint author of the conscription bill and a vigorous opponent of the Fish amendment, complained that if a call for 400,000 volunteers during the next two months should be successful, the Army would be unable to care for them. If the compulsory training bill is enacted, without the Fish amendment, tentative plans call for the induction of 50,000 men during the first part of November, 60,000 after November 15 and larger groups in the following months.

So the strongest argument against the Fish amendment is not the possible delay it would entail. More serious would be the psychological effect of a decision to postpone application of the draft until after election.

Congress has already voted approximately $15,000,000,000 for defense preparations. It has recognized that we are unprepared for self-defense in a world where military conquest is running riot. Yet our Congressmen have voted to postpone the operation of an effective military training program until after they have completed their political campaigns.

In other words, the House is willing to falter and fumble because this happens to be an election year. The vote on the Fish amendment thus becomes a grave confession of weakness. It reflects discredit upon the quality of statesmanship in the House. What is far more serious, it suggests that our democratic system is not equal to the stern task of preparing the Nation for defense in the present emergency.

Even though the Fish amendment might not seriously delay the induction of trainees into the Army, it would make hash out of the careful plan represented by the Burke-Wadsworth bill. No one should forget that under this bill voluntary soldiers would still be sought. Many thousands of men are needed to bring our professional Army up to its full authorized strength. These must be obtained through three-year voluntary enlistments.

The Fish amendment would cut off the flow of three-year recruits into the Regular Army. Its adoption would bring a drive for one-year enlistments. We would thus acquire a reserve army composed of both volunteers and drafted men. And the Regular Army which must train these one-year recruits would be denied the essential increase in its professional personnel.

In approving this bungling proposal House members were probably swayed by the appeal that the voluntary system be given a last trial. That system is already being used for the only purpose to which it is adapted. Actually the House voted to upset the voluntary three-year enlistment plan without removing the necessity for conscription.

It appears, moreover, that the Fish amendment would limit the total number of men to be drafted or accepted as volunteers to 800,000. That number is far below the reserve force which the Army believes to be essential to national defense.

Enactment of this amendment would be inevitably regarded as a cheap political trick. Does the House want the country to understand that it is afraid to take a stand for effective national defense until the campaigns are over? If not, it will hasten to reverse this thoughtless vote and send the military training bill to the President.

For The Record

Secretary Hull wasted no time in taking cognizance of reports of an imminent Japanese invasion of French Indo-China. In a statement to newspapermen, he reminded Japan of her repeated promises to preserve the status quo in the Pacific. If these reports are well-founded, he said, "the effect upon public opinion in the United States would be unfortunate."

The mildness of the Secretary of State's admonition to the island empire may be partly explained by the lack of official confirmation of the reports concerning Indo-China. In any event, it serves to inform Tokyo that the United States is not permitting its very real interest in the European situation to blind its eyes to Far Eastern developments.

The seizure of Indo-China by Japan would not only mean destruction of the status quo in Eastern Asia; it would also raise grave strategic problems for the United States and other Western powers with interests in the Far East.

Nor is Japan likely to ignore the probability that the transfer of the 50 over-age destroyers to Great Britain, increasing that nation's capacity to resist invasion, will enable the United States to retain its fleet in the Pacific.

It may be more than a coincidence, therefore, that later reports from Hongkong and Hanoi tell of a moderation in Japanese demands on the French Indo-China authorities. Impatient as Japan has been to cash in on European developments, the attitude of the United States as repeatedly expressed by Secretary Hull may help to persuade her that discretion is still the better part of valor.

Vital Purchase

The District's health record for 1939, as revealed in Health Officer George C. Ruhland's report, is the more remarkable when one considers the slender appropriations on which the Health Department operates.

For the fiscal year 1940, which included the last half of the period covered in Dr. Ruhland's report, he placed his department's needs at $3,143,032. The District Commissioners trimmed his estimate drastically. Congress restored some items, but the final appropriation was $2,508,860.

Despite this financial handicap, infant mortality and the death rate from pneumonia were reduced to the lowest on record here. Of every thousand babies born alive, 48 died under one year of age. Preliminary statistics of the United States Public Health Service estimate the national rate at 47. In 1937 the figure for the District was 61 and for the Nation 54.

The results of laboratory and other work to combat pneumonia are reflected in even more striking fashion. From 121 per 100,000 population in 1937, the death rate from pneumonia was reduced to 72 in 1939. The long fight against tuberculosis, carried on in the face of hindrances, was still a winning one. The rate of fatality was cut from 94 per 100,000 persons in 1938 to 87 in 1939. And Washington's 1939 general death rate of 12.98 per 1,000 was a far cry from the 16.09 of early last decade. At that time the District death rate was called the "highest in the United States."

If these gains are to be extended, appropriations must be forthcoming. As Dr. Ruhland has remarked, public health can be bought. It is a sad commentary on the peculiar fiscal situation of the District that, while hundreds of thousands can be spent on highway bridges, the purchase most vital to all must stop far short of adequacy.

Dr. Hans Zinsser

In the death of Dr. Hans Zinsser the United States has lost a distinguished son of German ancestry. The parents of this scientist and writer migrated from the Rhineland to New England. He exemplified the millions of loyal citizens whose ancestors came to America to enjoy the political freedom denied to them in the Old World.

This country gave him opportunity to pursue his scientific interests. And he gave back to the world valuable contributions in the fields of bacteriological research and literature.

Because of his literary excursions—which produced best-sellers rich in human philosophy—Dr. Zinsser will not be remembered merely as a man whose researches in odd corners of the earth helped to drive back the age-old plague of typhus. He was a specialist, it is true, but he resembled the scientists of the past in that he exercised his mind in many different directions. The habits of men were no less important to him than the peculiarities of the lice he studied.

It is a matter of deep regret that he was not vouchsafed a longer period for pursuit of the simple verities of life in his honest and good-humored way.

Well, anyway, doctors are honest. They call it "practicing."

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal

Not once in a recent motor trip of around a thousand miles did we see a highway or street sign that said "Slow Men Working." We did see "Caution, Men Working," and we saw "Danger, Men Working." In fact there was a variety of indications that work was in progress and that the motorist should proceed slowly. The absence of the "Slow Men Working" signs we interpret as a tribute to the power of ridicule, for all sorts of wisecracks have been whittled out and used on that theme, these last seven or eight years especially. It means the truth still hurts, too, and that the official consciousness can be penetrated. Interesting all the way round.

More On The Guard

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter from a guardsman to his mother, published by The Post, is well backed by the truth. From personal experience I can readily say that just about everything mentioned in his letter has a basis of fact. Having been in the Regular Army for many years I can readily say that much of the years was spent on just such useless maneuvers as this summer's concentration—men insufficiently equipped from organizations that spend more money on floor wax and brass polish than on ammunition for the training of men with small arms, men who often only fire the rifle or pistol once in three years, then only fire 70 or 120 rounds.

Many times money is spent that is taken from organization funds which supposedly is used for the soldiers' recreation, but in reality to buy paint or cleaning materials the quartermaster will not issue, just to provide eyewash for a brass-hat whose greatest abilities lie in finding a spot of dust or tarnish on the collar ornaments of the lowly buck private. Often I have spent frenzied weeks shining, painting and cleaning to cover a multitude of sins in anticipation of the annual visit of the corps area commander, only to be left with a letdown feeling mixed with a quality of elation when after all these hours and days of getting our best foot ready to shove forward, darn it, he never even bothers to look in on our section.

This soldier gets a big laugh out of all the fuss over conscription and mobilization of the National Guard.

Millions of men training for national defense! At what? Foot drill and fatigue? With what? Perhaps with wooden guns and long-handled shovels. With inadequate equipment for the Regular Army (much of the insufficient equipment is antiquated, left over from 1918, when the Government was just as gullible as it is now and bought tremendous amounts of supplies), how will they even supply them with uniforms? Why, they couldn't even supply them with enough picks and shovels to keep them busy.

In the old days a stick for a rifle and plenty of squads east would have been fine, but in these days of mechanized and motorized blitzkriegs a plank on wheels won't show men how to use gun sights, nor will a lecture by an incompetent reserve officer, many of whom have to be told what to do by the enlisted man, enable a conscript to visualize defense against ground strafing and dive bombing from hedge-hopping light bombers, nor against a steamroller attack by 40 to 50 mile per hour tanks spitting .50-caliber machine-gun slugs and coughing out a heavier caliber shell every few seconds.

NECESSARILY ANONYMOUS.

G. O. P. Leadership And Defense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In 1916 we were represented as "too proud to fight." Are we today too proud to defend ourselves?

There may be questions as to the details of defense. Among thinking people there can be no question as to the need for defense. Neither can there be question as to the basic elements of defense.

The elements of national defense are there, the same that have existed in every country since history began. These elements are armament, men, morale.

As this is written, we have appropriated billions for armament. But our Congress is haggling and piddling over the question of men to handle that armament. The Senate has finally passed the bill to get them, and it has gone over to the House.

But that haggling and piddling, that evasion of facts, is ruining the third element—morale. And without that third element, the first two are as useless as was the Maginot Line.

The Republican Party is missing the greatest opportunity. It could today be standing as the party which is proud to defend America.

It has the candidate. He is energetic and dynamic. He is not afraid to face facts. He stirred tremendous response by the drama of his capture of the Republican nomination. He is obviously the candidate best fitted to organize national defense.

All he needs to be sure of winning the election is a party. But at this date he still lacks a party. He still lacks party leaders ready to support his vigor, energy and ability to lead in the one paramount issue of the day—national defense.

A vigorous President cannot act without vigorous support in Congress. As between Republican and Democratic evasion, haggling and piddling, why should the country choose the Republican instead of the Democratic kind?

The President has spread a wide-open opportunity in front of the Republicans. By his dilatory and irresponsible leadership, he has convinced millions of people that he is not the best man to organize national defense.

There was the opportunity two months ago. And there it is still waiting.

To grasp it, Republicans would only have to get up on the floor of the Senate and the House and state the facts which all intelligent people, including themselves, already know. They would have only to state the facts in terms of action demanded. They would have only to speak for people who are proud of America and ready to prepare, not next year but now to defend it.

That action on their part would involve risk. There are many people in this country who believe that Europe is a million miles away and who would be afraid to touch a gun. These people, of course, have votes.

But if they are by now a majority, somebody will eventually take this country away from us anyway. Therefore, the risk might be run of assuming that the majority of voters do know what is going on in the world and are eager to find skillful and resolute leadership.

Hitler does not shrink from risks. He calculates risks. But when he has made his calculations, he takes the risks. And the map shows where they have brought him.

Whatever we may think of Germany's aims, no one has ever alleged that Germans as soliders are stupid and timorous. Everybody knows that they are skillful and resolute fighters.

What would happen if a major party adopted as its platform the assumption that most young Americans are also skillful and resolute?

Republican leaders could find out. All they have to do is to tell the Republican nominee to go the limit on national defense and then back him to the full with all their influence in the Congress.

They would, of course, lose some timid independent votes. But the belief of this reader of your columns is that they would get the surprise of their political lives.

They would find that there is a tremendous vote which, in this particular year 1940, has forgotten the labels Republican and Democratic, and wants to vote American. They are proud of America and want to know how to defend it. That vote would go to the Republican candidate if they could be sure the Republican politicians would support him.

Hails Lippmann

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hail to the article by Walter Lippmann in The Post of September 3 entitled "The Consciousness of Greatness!" It is a statement of present-day practice among the academic "historians" that has long needed to be said with force and clarity—the practice of "snooping," rather than "researching"; of cynicism rather than truth; of hunting for gutter filth, rather than for the good, clean earth; and through it all ignoring the really great accomplishments of the subject under study, while carefully and with great painstaking "footnotes" building up a most adroit summation of "hitherto unrevealed evidence" to the ultimate climax—of truth? No! of character smirching and of breeding in the present-day student a spirit of cynical hopelessness.

It is not clear how much of the article is Lippmann's and how much is his condensation of a paper by Alfred Vagts, circulated by the American Military Institute; but the article is worthy of being reprinted as a document for circulation among the young men and women and adolescent youth of today's high schools and colleges. Let me quote the significant passages: "The teaching of politics and history in American colleges has, for the most part, been emptied of all the elements of greatness—that is to say, of the conviction that history is not the meaningless tale of a race of mercenary idiots, but the record of great men and great people struggling indomitably to rise out of the sloth and squalor of their barbaric origins. So the young men of our generation have been deprived of their birthright, which is to be conscious that they are the children of a high destiny, in the line of great men who performed great deeds . . . who had faith when men were hopeless, who fortified reason against unreason, vindicated justice against violence and, in the jungle of animal passion cleared the spaces where the air is free and clear and tranquil."

A Sad Case

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just returned from the melancholy duty of visiting an old friend who for the past few days has been confined in an asylum. This unhappy man is the victim of a patriotic frenzy induced, his relatives say, by his insistence upon listening to the broadcast proceedings of the Republican and Democratic conventions and to the Willkie notification ceremonies.

The doctors take a very serious view of my friend's case, notwithstanding occasional intervals of lucidity and relative composure. It was, however, in one of his agitated (or maniac) moments that my friend composed the following lines, for which he begged me to find publication, if possible:

Gawd help Ah-mury-cawl
No other can!
Gawd slay those Men of bathos
Who rag with a flag and tin pan;
From the maudlin
To the putrid
For a Nation drenched in goo—
Gawd save Ah-mury-caw,
My Hitchy-koo!

It is part of the pitiful delusion from which my friend suffers that he believes the publication of these lines will somehow rally all lovers of civilization to make a final stand against the engulfing hordes of barbarism. Since my friend is a devout reader of your estimable publication, I trust that you will, in your charity, assist me to "humor him"—as his doctors have advised.

The Post Impressionist

'For the Duration'

HE LOOKS astonishingly like Virginia—that same direct blue gaze that asks why and how, and that long-legged new colt look that Virginia never outgrew. But he talks and acts like Howard—the precise British inflection I remember—the slow but ultimately certain ways. He and my Betty Ann are waiting by the fish pond for us. He stands there solemn and intent in his Sunday clothes while Betty frisks about the pond, pointing and gesticulating. I must get him a new suit. In one summer he has spurted from any suspicion of babiness into a boy, and the little Eton suit which fitted him so neatly last spring is now snug and too short in the sleeves.

Dicky came to us in April direct from an evacuation camp in England. I planned to meet the boat, but at the last moment Betty Ann came down with sore throat and fever, so the first glimpse I had of my only nephew was when I found him riding a baggage truck through Union Station while Fred, my husband, followed, trying to locate Dicky's scattered bags and hampers. He gave the same intent preoccupation to the baggage truck and the good-natured porter which he gives to everything that is new to him, and he greeted me with a solemn reserve which set me back for a moment.

"How do you do, Aunt Helen," a firm, manly handshake, and that was that.

On the drive through Washington he was quiet, looking out the window of the car at the passing scene, and saying little. He recognized the Capitol from a picture his mother had shown him. He also knew the Washington Monument. Looking at the Potomac with quiet disdain, he said, "The Thames has boats on it." And I could think of no suitable reply to that flat statement of fact. Any defense of the Potomac as being beautiful or historic would have seemed irrelevant.

WHEN we reached home he looked about him carefully as though he were making a check of the house to see if all were as it should be. But he said little and evidenced no enthusiasm or great curiosity. This worried me at first. It didn't seem quite natural. Had they mistreated him at the camp—were his spirits broken—just how bad were things in England? After all, he was only a baby—7. I tried to picture my 10-year-old Betty Ann being whisked from home into strange surroundings, making a lonely trip across the Atlantic to relatives whom she had never seen. The picture just wouldn't take form in my mind. It was one of those impossibilities that don't happen to you or yours. And yet it had happened to my sister, Virginia, and the nice tweedy pink-cheeked Howard whom I had had so little opportunity to know.

After a few days Dicky loosened up and I felt a bit better. He was asking questions. Was this mama's room when she was little? Is this the window that you could see the pear tree from? Is this the horse that mama rode? Show me the place where papa worked when he was in America.

I was on familiar ground again and it was sheer delight to acquaint him with the four-dimensional reality of the world his mother had described to him from the time he was old enough to understand at all. And in return he gave me his world, the world that had been Virginia's for almost ten years, and it took form for me as it never had from her letters. I could see the house in the London suburbs, the Sunday trips to the museums and parks, Buckingham Palace and the bright uniforms of the guard. Not so clearly could I see the blackouts, sandbags, gas masks and the bus loads and trains of children leaving London. Those were things that I didn't want to see, and there was a vague, painful itch in my mind when the words antiair guns, parachutes, bombers dropped casually from his lips. "For the duration" was a common phrase which he spoke with accustomed ease, and when I realized he was sure it meant only until the holidays I wanted to gather him close and press everything else away—everything that he might accidentally hear or see which would disturb that calm conviction that events could still be tied up in neat bundles of days and weeks and months.

I WANTED Virginia to come home when Dicky came over. I remember writing what I thought was a very sensible letter. Her reply was a determined almost indignant "no." Safety for Dicky, yes, absolutely, but as for her, home was England, her husband's country and her place was there! I needn't have been surprised. That determination, that rightness was Virginia, the same Virginia who left her family and all that she had known at the age of 19 to marry the quiet, studious young archeologist and follow him to England. It was the same Virginia who, a bride of a year, had seen Howard go off on his Egyptian expedition for an indeterminate time only a month before Dicky was born.

It is now September, and the holidays of which Dicky spoke so confidently in April are only a little over three months away. He doesn't speak of them in terms of home any more. He is looking forward to Christmas here with Betty Ann now. It isn't resignation. It is only childhood. The resilience of youth is a comforting and yet a saddening thing. Dicky is growing less British by the day. He reads the funnies and listens to the Lone Ranger. I am careful about the radio, though. His precocity about war terms is disturbing and I don't want him to be frightened. I must go out to him now. Betty Ann's restlessness is catching and the fish pond an intriguing place. They mustn't muddy themselves before Sunday school—Southern Methodism in lieu of the Church of England.

Voluntary Enlistment

Conscription Bill Conclusions

THE CONSCRIPTION debate has consumed 14 legislative days (19 calendar weekdays) in the Senate, and in the House, 5 days. About all that can possibly be said, on both sides, or from any angle, including arguments by Congressmen, extracts from the testimony of military and other experts before committees of Congress, and reprints of discussions outside Congress—all is in the 2,200 pages of the Congressional Record since August 9. All this, the writer of this column has scanned, much he has read carefully. On this basis, and admitting complete lack of any particular qualification for judgment, the writer has arrived at certain conclusions, or received certain impressions. The most pertinent ones are here stated—subject to the likelihood of error on some points, and subject to the difficulty, the impossibility, of condensing some 2,000,000 or 4,000,000 words of Congressional debate into 700 or so words of newspaper dispatch:

The United States needs an air force, from 30,000 to 50,000 planes, with the necessary man power for pilots and ground service.

The United States needs a Navy, very large, probably twice as large as any we have ever had.

THE UNITED STATES Army does not need to be so large. We need a Regular standing Army of some 800,000. This would be 500,000 more than the present Regular Army, which is some 300,000. (Some would say the Army should be a million, some a million two hundred thousand.) This should be a professional Army, of the greatest attainable skill and training; highly mechanized, most of the men being mechanics, artisans and engineers of the most skilled type, with especial capacity for cooperation, coordination of services. This Army should be as able in teamwork as a football squad kept in continuous topnotch training. It should be as adept in coordination of services as that part of the German army, which, though not great in numbers, probably not over 100,000, was able to break through the French defenses and thus bring about defeat of a French army of millions.

Because our Regular, standing Army should have these qualities of mechanical skill, and experience in coordination, it should be made up mainly, probably wholly, of professional soldiers—men who join the Army as a job, a career, and who remain in it through one enlistment term after another, because they like it as a career; men who join the Army in the same spirit in which other men join the police force, or become firemen or school teachers or enter other public services. To insure this, the pay and other conditions of Army service should be comparable to the compensation of other public services. Steps toward this are now being taken.

Such a Regular Army, of say 800,000, would be adequate for any foreseeable need. But our policy should take care of even unforeseeable emergency. For this, there should be a great reservoir of partially trained men who can be called upon for drafting into the Regular Army.

TO PROVIDE this reservoir, if it turns out to be a permanent need, an obvious method would be to furnish training, for not exceeding a year, to young men as they leave school or college. This should be training, as distinct from actual service in the Army. The training, if it is confined to training only, can be compulsory and universal. No serious question of principle or of American tradition is involved in requiring young men to take training, the same as they are required to go to school in the ordinary sense. To require men to enter the Army, however; to conscript them for service, when the country is not engaged in war, raises just the difficult question of principle which is involved in the pending conscription bill. If the training is compulsory and universal, it should be literally universal, without exception for anyone.

There is one possible contingency which might justify enactment of the present conscription bill. This contingency would consist of the following circumstances: (a) Conquest of Britain by Germany; (b) including acquisition by Germany of the British fleet; (c) at a time before we will have been able to build up our air force and Navy. Such a contingency exists. We are obliged to take account of it. It would be extremely awkward for us. Because this contingency exists, it is to our interest to help Britain, with destroyers or otherwise, so as to prevent the contingency if possible, or postpone it until we are better prepared.

If the contingency above described should actually happen, then possession of even a hastily extemporized Army, through the present conscription bill, would be of some value to us.

THE QUESTION is: Admitting this contingency exists and that we should prepare for it as best we can, which would be better? (a) An Army hastily extemporized by means of the pending conscription bill; or (b) an Army created as rapidly as possible through voluntary enlistment of the kind now going on. Voluntary enlistment is proceeding on a large and rapidly increasing scale. During June, the first full month after Congress authorized more enlistments, the number of recruits was 23,442. In July, it rose to 31,985. The number for August is not yet fully reported. It is estimated to be over 40,000.

The pending conscription bill contemplates an addition of 400,000 before next April. The question is whether voluntary enlistment, with its present ascending rate, would provide a comparable number within a comparable time.

Bishop Hughes Urges Vote By Nation on Third Term

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, retired resident Bishop of the Washington area of the Methodist Church, yesterday urged that a constitutional amendment limiting the Presidential term of office be submitted to the country immediately after the November elections.

Bishop Hughes, the first clergyman to testify before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearing pleas for a limitation on White House tenure, said the issue would then be "wholly removed from personal and partisan motives that are now too prone to affect some of our people."

Another witness, former Representative Samuel B. Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana, said the public should disregard the argument that "it can't happen here."

Points to Huey Long

"It has happened here," said Pettengill. "This country has already had several small-scale dictators. Mr. Huey Long was one. His will became the law of a great State. He held in the hollow of his hand the Legislature, the judiciary and the machinery to nominate and elect all candidates for public office including himself."

Bishop Hughes told the subcommittee that never in his eight years' residence here had he spoken disrespectfully of the President and never had he received from Mr. Roosevelt anything "save the most courteous consideration," adding:

"I appear here for nobody and against nobody."

But the Methodist bishop said he was "interested in the distinct maintenance of an American principle, and I heartily favor putting our unwritten law into Constitutional form."

Bishop Hughes said that never in 37 years had he heard anyone favor a third term for any President "unless he was definitely influenced by some current conditions that tied him with ardor to either a person or a party."

He said that by limiting tenure the possibilities of patronage would be decreased and "we would secure periods wherein our President could act solely with a view to the next generation rather than to the next election."

Cites Situation Abroad

Pettengill told the subcommittee Huey Long might have remained dictator of Louisiana for life except for a provision written into the Louisiana constitution that no governor shall be eligible to succeed himself. The former House member said 34 States now have express constitutional limitations on tenure in office by the Governor or other important officials.

Pettengill siad if any President breaks the two-term "tradition" then "what restraint of freedom will you then put upon him or he upon himself?" Look abroad where the dykes erected by free men have broken down."

The Militant Dance Note

"Military mood will feature the new fall dances, according to Miss Mary O'Moore, president of the American Dancing Teachers Association now in convention. 'One new dance,' said Miss O'Moore, starts off with a gun salute and ends with a gun being broken over the knee as a gesture of good fellowship. The whole dance has a decided patriotic touch.' "—News item.

"What does the lady mean by saying a military mood will feature new dances?" demanded Elmer Twitchell, the old lancers champion, today. "Except among the very young people, a military mood has always featured dancing!

"Some of my most military moods have been experienced while tripping the light fantastic, and I can say the same for Mrs. Twitchell. In fact, I know of few more warlike moments than those the wife and I have experienced on the dance floor.

"The idea of firing a gun at the start of a dance is swell, nevertheless. All of us feel the urge to fire one during the dance or at its conclusion, and everybody would feel better all around if the firing was done at the first blast from the orchestra. My great fear is that the wife will not use blanks."

"What do you think of the business of breaking a gun over the knee at the end of a dance as a gesture of good fellowship?" he was asked.

"It will never get anywhere among dancers over 35 or 40," he insisted with feeling. "Most dancers may feel like breaking a gun over some part of their partner's anatomy, but not over the knee, and never as a gesture of good fellowship. Whatever good fellowship may have been felt when the dance started has been definitely wiped out by the end of the dance, and it takes days to restore it. In some cases it is never revived."

"Do you think dancing can do anything for patriotism, Mr. Twitchell?"

"Not unless patriotism consists wholly of feeling warlike," Elmer replied.

"Miss O'Moore seems to be of the idea that dancing can be linked up with the whole matter of patriotism, Americanism and even preparedness. What do you think of this angle?"

"Well, I think the idea will be more popular than conscription," said Elmer sagely. "But personally I never felt any more patriotic doing a rhumba than when not doing it. From the shape America is in, however, I wouldn't be surprised if the Government had been subscribing to the theory that dancing is the handmaiden of preparedness."

"Are you as an American willing to do your bit by at least helping to give dancing a militant flavor?" Mr. Twitchell was asked.

"The Twitchells have never failed in an hour of duty," he replied, drawing himself to his full height of 5 feet 2 inches. "These are grave times. Mrs. Twitchell and I are alive to the grave crisis. We realize that the fate of civilization may hang in the balance. Tell America for us that from now on we will carry an American flag while dancing anywhere, that Mrs. Twitchell will wear a rocket in her hair (one if by sea and two if by land) and that whenever possible I will enter the dance hall on a pony, singing 'Yankee Doodle.' "

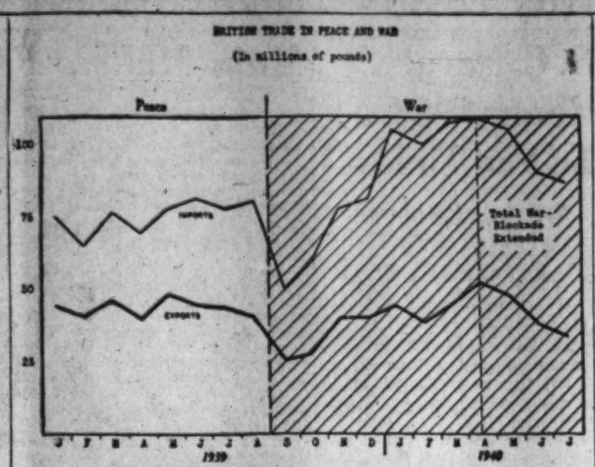
Md. Resort Town Bemoans Forecast That 'Cost $50,000'

Ocean City, Md., Sept. 6 (AP).—That threatened Labor Day storm, that never developed, cost Ocean City an estimated $50,000.

Chamber of Commerce officials estimated that was the loss in revenue which would have been paid city merchants, hotelmen, restaurateurs and others if an expected crowd had not been "frightened away" by reports of a hurricane, moving up from the south.

Cancellations of reservations for the week-end "poured in" officials said, after reports of the storm threat became widespread. Many persons already registered at hotels evacuated the resort.

The resort's week-end weather was mild and bright, except for a brief sprinkle Sunday afternoon. The storm veered to sea far to the south.



ALL THE BELLIGERENT nations of Europe have subjected their foreign trade to strict regimentation, and the controls adopted by democratic Britain have been about as rigid as those employed by the totalitarian powers. As a result, much of the world's peacetime commerce has been destroyed, and much of what still remains has been diverted into unusual channels through efforts to eliminate nonessential imports and to encourage exports.

The trend of British trade, immediately before and during the war, is shown in the accompanying chart. Due to heavy purchases of munitions, imports have expanded much more rapidly than exports. There was a sharp decline in both, however, during the first weeks of the war, largely because of the dislocation of shipping facilities. Thereafter, until the end of April, 1940, both imports and exports steadily expanded. The German invasion of western Europe and the extension of the British blockade to the occupied countries led to a marked curtailment of Britain's trade. Her exports in July, 1940, were 18 per cent less in value than in July, 1939. Imports likewise declined, but in July they were still 7 per cent above those of the corresponding month a year ago.

In spite of the war, Great Britain has been fairly successful in maintaining her trade with her overseas dominions and with the United States and South America. At the present time she is making further efforts to increase her exports to these areas and thus offset her loss of trade with continental Europe.

What Conscription Means to You

Nonresidents Can Register by Mail

(Editor's Note: With conscription a certainty, The Post has presented a series designed to answer everyone's questions about the effect of the draft on him. The series is based on legislation that has passed the Senate and the plans drawn up by selective service specialists since the World War. This is the last of 14 articles. Questions are invited.)

By George Thorpe

Bulking large in the cross-section of the Nation faced with conscription are thousands of youths—former service men, Government workers, college students—who have special reasons for claiming exemptions or deferments.

Because of the repetition of the questions of greatest interest, The Post recapitulates the answers of previous articles:

Where must a person living away from his legal residence (as in the case of Federal workers, college students) register? In the home community or where he is residing?

Highly specialized machinery will permit registration in either place. A Government employe could register here or at a registration precinct in his State by mail, thus avoiding the expense of a trip home.

Further, should a prospective trainee desire to be inducted from his home community he could also arrange classification by mail. The process here will be a "classification transfer" in which he would submit his questionnaire to a local selection board which then would transfer it to a corresponding board at his place of residence.

Are college students, including R. O. T. C. cadets, to be exempted or deferred?

According to the Senate bill, only divinity students will be exempted (although they must register). However, the measure reported favorably by the House Military Affairs Committee would defer college students, who had commenced the school year, until its close the following summer. Then they would be eligible for conscription.

Likewise exempted by the Senate bill are R. O. T. C. cadets in the advanced course (third and fourth years) students in the basic two-year course, who have completed it but fail to continue in the advanced course, and those who finish the four years' training but for any reason fail to win a reserve officer's commission are in line for conscription.

Will Government workers, including those in defense agencies, be deferred?

"No deferment of training and service shall be made in the case of any individual except upon the basis of the status of such individual, and no such deferment . . . shall be made by occupational groups."

This clause in the Burke-Wadsworth bill makes it clear deferment depends on the relative importance of the job. Executive, judicial and legislative officers who would be difficult to replace quickly will be deferred.

On the other hand, an employe who performs clerical duties or other work which requires no particular skill or knowledge is not "necessary to the national health." The mere fact that a man works in a defense agency is no grounds for exemption or deferment.

What about former service men?

Former soldiers, sailors, marines and Coast Guardsmen not connected with reserve units must register. Whether or not they will be deferred is a matter for the selection board to decide. The decision will rest principally on how recently they had seen service.

Duplicates Training

Had they been on duty within the last few years they would undoubtedly be deferred, according to selective service experts. A year in a conscription camp would only duplicate their former training.

Will trainees be given a choice of service branches?

At present, no. The Navy and Marine Corps are not yet ready to absorb trainees, because of training center "bottlenecks." Men called up on the first calls will all go to the Army. However, when the Navy and Marine training systems are ready (in about a year, it is expected), candidates will be given a choice and qualifications for the respective branches will be taken into consideration.

Who are dependents?

Dependents are defined as anyone whose existence would be threatened should the trainee's income be withdrawn—not merely forced to forego luxuries. A wife with a job and able to support herself separately is not a dependent. A widowed mother without resources of her own is a dependent.

Dependency Example

A Post reader presented this situation: She is a widow in failing health, with five children, two of whom are minors. Her three draftage sons each contributes $10 a week to the family support. Should any of the three for any reason lose their jobs, she would be forced to seek Government relief.

It is certain that a selection board would defer all three of her sons. Indeed, at this time, the boards will show little hesitation in deferring youths whose duties at home overshadow their value to a conscript army of a country still at peace.

Arnold In Earnest

THURMAN ARNOLD, who, according to the Saturday Evening Post, looks like a small-town storekeeper and talks like a native Rabelais, has settled down since he wrote his lively "Folklore of Capitalism." That book was the product of a sheep-rancher, sometime mayor of Laramie, Wyo., who was temporarily a professor of law at Yale, and felt he could afford to be impishly witty. "The Bottlenecks of Business" (Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.50) bears Thurman Arnold's name on the title page, but Mr. Arnold is now Assistant Attorney General of the United States, in charge of the antitrust division of the Department of Justice, and in deadly earnest.

"The Bottlenecks of Business" is the story of Mr. Arnold's one-man—well, he has a couple of hundred young lawyers to help him—effort to enforce the Sherman Act, and so save capitalism, lower prices, free labor, raise the national standard of living, end the need for subsidies to business, farmers and the unemployed, balance the budget, and defend the Nation.

The Sherman Antitrust Act, you may recall, was passed just 50 years ago, and its author was a conservative Republican who had served as President Hayes' Secretary of the Treasury and was later to serve as McKinley's first Secretary of State. But apparently, until Thurman Arnold came roaring out of Wyoming, West Virginia and Connecticut no one had ever thought really seriously about enforcing it. The literature of speeches, criticisms, amendments, court interpretations and indorsements of the Act is tremendous. But at the height of Theodore Roosevelt's "trust-busting" activities, when the act was almost as famous as Mr. Dooley himself, the staff of the antitrust division of the Department of Justice reached an all-time high of five lawyers and four stenographers. Later, the division grew. By 1933 it had 15 lawyers on its staff. Today, it has 200. Mr. Arnold apparently thinks it should have at least a thousand.

IT MIGHT PAY to hire them, especially if they were the type of able and excited young men Mr. Arnold gathers about him. When Congress failed to appropriate for his staff's traveling expenses last year, these public servants paid their own way. In six months of 1939 the division spent $700,000 of the taxpayers' money—and collected $2,400,000 in fines levied by the courts. Voting additional credits to Mr. Arnold's division seems to have been the most effective form of budget balancing yet devised.

Mr. Arnold has no particular objection to big corporations, but he has an old-fashioned American passion for honest competition, and he believes, with all the religious passion of his New England forebears and a more modern vocabulary, that price competition will be the salvation of the American system. He isn't interested in "national planners" or in any kind of "new system." He doesn't hate "monoply"—there are only one or two real monopolies in the country, he says. But there is a whole system of manipulation of patents, selling agreements, bidding depositaries and other restraints of trade, manifestly in violation of the Sherman Act, which maintain an artificial price structure, retard sales, promote inefficiency and lead the country in the direction of totalitarianism. Businessmen who buck the system are denounced as chiseling price-cutters; enforcement of the Sherman Act, says Mr. Arnold, would protect the patriots among them and serve as our first line of national defense.

Part of Mr. Arnold's book is an exposition of the theory behind his dramatic administration of the antitrust division; part of it is a case record. He tells how the manufacturers of military optical supplies coolly informed the Navy Department that they would not furnish range finders for our new cruisers unless Mr. Arnold were called off—but soon changed their minds and got to work; how prosecution in Chicago brought the price of milk down 4 cents a quart and saved the milk drinkers of the Windy City some $10,000,000 a year; how his suits forced down the price of eyeglasses and of gasoline, and made a beginning at cleaning up the rackets in the building industry in which contractors and undemocratic labor unions were allies.

The Method Of The British Agreement

THE QUESTION is whether the agreement with Great Britain might have been consummated in a way which would have been less subject to the criticism that the President has relied upon a strained construction of the law. Upon reflection I think that such a way existed. But I hasten to confess that it had not occurred to me until—after the agreement and the Attorney General's opinion had been published—when a friend of mine, who has been doing historical research on matters unrelated to foreign affairs, turned up a letter written by Thomas Jefferson in 1810.

The letter is interesting because in it Jefferson discusses the very question which Mr. Roosevelt had to resolve when he was deciding whether to make the agreement by executive action or, as Mr. Willkie and others maintain, to seek "the approval of Congress . . . prior to adoption." In 1810 when Jefferson had retired, a certain J. B. Colvin was working in the State Department and was also writing, or as we should now say, ghost-writing, the memoirs of Gen. Wilkinson. Colvin wrote to Jefferson asking him this question: "Are there not periods when, in free governments, it is necessary for officers in responsible stations to exercise an authority beyond the law?" and Jefferson replied as follows:

"Further to exemplify the principle, I will state an hypothetical case. Suppose it had been known to the executive of the Union in the autumn of 1805, that we might have the Floridas for a reasonable sum, that that sum had not indeed been so appropriated by law, but that Congress were to meet within three weeks, and might appropriate it on the first or second day of their session. Ought he, for so great an advantage to his country, to have risked himself by transcending the law and making the purchase? The public advantage offered, in this supposed case, was indeed immense: but a reverence for law, and the probability that the advantage might still be legally accomplished by a delay of only three weeks, were powerful reasons against hazarding the act. But suppose it foreseen that a John Randolph would find means to protract the proceeding on it by Congress, until the ensuing spring, by which time new circumstances would change the mind of the other party. Ought the executive, in that case, and with that fore-knowledge, to have secured the good to his country, and to have trusted to their justice for the transgression of the law? I think he ought, and that the act would have been approved."

THE SITUATION which Jefferson presents here is an exact analogy to the situation which the President faced in June when there arose the complex problem of obtaining the naval bases, reinforcing the commitment that the British fleet would not be surrendered, and transferring the 50 over-age destroyers. Should he have waited for Congressional approval when he foresaw that "a John Randolph would find means to protract the proceedings on it by Congress, until the ensuing spring, by which time new circumstances would change the mind of the other party"? This was the real problem of "method." Although there is little doubt that Congress would eventually have approved the agreement, there is also no doubt that the debate, under the rules of the Senate, would have been protracted and that this measure of national defense along with the conscription bill and the other measures of national defense would have been subject to indefinite delay.

But if the agreement was to be made at all, it could not be delayed. For the whole agreement arose out of the recognized possibility that Great Britain might be defeated this season. If the United States was to obtain bases in the British possessions, it had to obtain them while there was a British government willing and able to grant the legal right and to facilitate the actual taking possession. Furthermore, the pledge not to surrender or scuttle the fleet had to be obtained while the fleet was still in being and based upon the British Isles. Finally, the payment for these two great contributions to our own national defense had to be made in the only coin which was of value to Great Britain—namely, destroyers delivered now in this critical period when Britain, though undefeated, is short of destroyers. For the destroyers would be useless if Britain had been defeated; they would not be nearly so valuable next spring when Britain's new destroyers will be ready.

It follows that if the agreement was to be made, there could be no delay. To admit delay was to risk the chance that the agreement could never be consummated effectively.

SO FAR, it seems to me, the opinion of Jefferson and the hard facts of the case itself, justify the President in not waiting to obtain the approval of Congress. The opportunity to make secure an indisputable title to these bases might otherwise have been lost forever, and the solemn commitment to preserve the British fleet regardless of the outcome in the British Isles might never have become an engagement which binds the British throughout the world. The opportunity was unique. Once missed, it was irretrievable.

Where Jefferson's view of the proper action differs from the course taken by Mr. Roosevelt is that while Jefferson would have acted as did Mr. Roosevelt, he would not have relied entirely upon a strained construction of the statutes. He would also "have risked himself," have thrown himself upon the mercy of Congress and "have trusted to their justice for the transgression of the law." To have acted in this way would have been to perform this great historic deed in the grand style, candidly and gallantly. Had Mr. Roosevelt followed the Jeffersonian method as well as the Jeffersonian principle, he would have informed Congress that, though he has a legal opinion which supports his action, he recognizes that this opinion is strained, and that, having acted as he believed in the highest interests of the Nation, he now submits to the judgment of the Congress and the country as to whether he is to be censured or punished.

This procedure would have resolved the two conflicting interests involved in the situation: on the one hand, the imperative need to avoid delay by the only feasible method, namely executive action, and on the other hand, the general necessity of maintaining a respect for law and of never relinquishing the accountability of public officials.

ALL THIS, I repeat, is hindsight. But hindsight is not to be despised if it clarifies issues which in different forms are likely to arise again and again. The underlying problem here is the underlying problem of democratic government: how to maintain the essential safeguards of responsible government without enfeebling the government by interminable and confusing debate so that it is unable to act when action is necessary. It is often said in political discussion these days that we must jealously guard the democratic restraints upon the executive power lest we lose our liberties. This vigilance is admirable. But in our fear of strong government we must not forget that wherever democracy has been overthrown from within or conquered from without, the disaster has been preceded by a period of indecision, weakness, confusion. The liberties of Europe have been lost because democracy has been too weak to deal with its internal problems, too hesitant to prepare its defenses.

We must be careful, therefore, not to identify inaction with freedom, impotence with democracy, procrastination with respect for law. Above all, we must not lose confidence in ourselves to the point where we regard all initiative and all decisive action as in themselves dangerous to our liberties. That is a symptom of national degeneration, and one of the reasons why the writings of the founders of the Republic are a tonic to those who read them today, is that men like Jefferson, Madison, Monroe had enough confidence in their own deepest convictions to face danger without an incessant distrust of their own course.

They did not ask themselves every time they took a drink of wine whether they would be tempted irresistibly to become confirmed drunkards. They understood their principles too well and believed in them too firmly to become the timorous slaves of their own ideology. That is why they dealt so successfully with the awful perils which attended the birth of the Republic in a world wracked, then as now, by war and by revolution.

Deaths Increase In Pilot Training

Rise in Fatalities Is Laid to Speed-up; Legislators Protest

Accidents under the civilian pilot training program have quadrupled since June 15, while students enrollment has only been lifted about 50 per cent, Civil Aeronautics Authority officials disclosed yesterday.

They also revealed seven fatalities in the last two and a half months as compared with one in the previous 16 months.

Chairman Harllee Branch, of the Civil Aeronautics Board, refused comment, because "the training program is outside my jurisdiction."

"Stepping Up" Blamed

Officials directly concerned with the drive for pilots attributed increases in accidents and fatalities to "stepping up of the program."

"During the summer months" they said, "we have been trying to do what formerly took us nearly 18 months.

"What's more, we had approximately 10,000 students during the longer period and now we have half again as many more."

Speeding of the pilot reservoir, it was explained, inevitably would lead to increased accidents and fatalities.

Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, a Marine Corps reserve flyer, found it significant that "this accident rate has jumped so alarmingly since the disorganization of the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the abolition of the Air Safety Board."

While agreeing the record was "partially due, of course, to the speed up," Maas exclaimed, "we must recognize there was great expansion of aviation under the original CAA, and I can't help feeling that retention of the Safety Board would have prevented the disgraceful condition which exists today."

In a caustic memorandum under date of August 26, Grove Webster, acting director of the Civil Pilot Training Service, asserted, "landing accidents were by far the most prevalent." These he attributed to "lack of thorough instruction."

Attacks "Carelessness"

Webster also attacked "carelessness" on the part of student flyers, lack of thorough instruction resulting in take off accidents and failure of instructors to examine practice fields from the ground.

The present program, it was learned, will train 45,000 pilots by June 15, 1941. Training contracts totaling appromixately $7,700,000 already have been let, it was explained.

During the period from February, 1939, when the training program got underway, to June 15, 1940, when the last "class" entered, there have been 207 accidents, one fatal. Since June 15 there have been 144 accidents, six of them fatal.

kong today that Nishihara and the Indo-China governor, Vice Admiral Jean Decoux, had reached a general agreement on facilities to be granted to the Japanese in Indo-China. These, according to earlier reports, will give the Japanese military "limited" rights to land troops in Indo-China and transport them by railroad to China's back-door.

(From Chungking, the Chinese capital, the British news agency, Reuters, carried a report that Indo-China had agreed to the landing of 12,000 Japanese troops at three ports).

In addition to Secretary Hull's statement, the British have made diplomatic representations to Tokyo concerning their interest in preservation of the status quo of Indo-China.

Authorized Japanese sources have proclaimed Indo-China within the "greater East Asia" which they consider to be an exclusive Japanese sphere of interest.

Suma, dealing with Secretary Hull's expressed hope of an agreement under which American troops in Shanghai will be able to patrol a portion of the international defense sector vacated by British troops, asserted:

"The United States seems to be taking a great interest in Shanghai affairs, but we don't think them very important. The question should be settled on the spot."

(Three Chinese gunmen in Shanghai tried today to assassinate a special British police inspector, but he was unhurt).

Cabinet Shuffle Sends Weygand To Africa

General Will Fight Attempts to Separate Colonies From Vichy

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Sept. 6.—Chief of State Petain appointed a new cabinet for unoccupied France tonight and sent Gen. Maxime Weygand, former generalissimo of the French armies, to Africa to take personal charge of the situation arising from attempts to separate France's colonies from the homeland.

Pierre Laval, who remained as vice premier and right-hand man to Petain, announced after the new cabinet was proclaimed that the drastic shake-up was ordered to "strengthen governmental action."

Petain, retaining the premiership, will preside at meetings restricted to the inner cabinet of eight, composed of Laval, Paul Baudouin, foreign minister; Raphael Alibert, justice; Rene Belin, labor; Yves Bouthillier, finance; Admiral Jean Darlan, navy; Gen. Charles Huntziger, war, and Marcel Peyrouton, interior.

Weygand Given Wide Powers

All except Huntziger and Peyrouton were in the former cabinet. This inner group, known as the council of ministers, will draft and enact principal government reforms, Laval explained.

Weygand, who had been serving as minister of national defense, has been given very wide powers in Africa, Laval said, and will "assure the defense and security of the empire."

An airplane in which Weygand was a passenger overturned today landing at Limoges airdrome. He was not injured.

Gen. Huntziger, who headed the French armistice mission, succeeds Gen. Louis Colson. Peyrouton, secretary general of the administration and police, replaced Adrian Marquet.

Dunkerque Hero in Cabinet

Gen. Jean Marie Bergeret, another member of the armistice commission, succeeded Gen. Bertrand Pujo as secretary of state for aviation.

Jean Berthelot succeeded Deputy Francois Pietri as secretary for communications.

Rear Admiral Rene Platon, a hero of the Allied retreat from Dunkerque, replaced Senator Henry Lemery as secretary for colonies.

Georges Ripert was named minister of education and youth. The former minister of youth and family was Jean Ybarnegaray, while Senator Emile Mireaux was minister of public instruction, posts apparently consolidated.

Pierre Caziot remains as agriculture minister.

A number of those named are in the United States. All of the Rothschild banking fortune left in France, and the property of the others stripped of citizenship, will be confiscated.

Among those involved were:

Former Air Minister Pierre Cot, Baron Edouard, Philippe, Henri, Maurice and Robert de Rothschild; Leon and Maurice Stern, David Weil and the journalists Edouard Grenat, Henri de Kerillis, Genevieve Tabouis, Emile Bure, Andre Geraud (Pertinax), and Eli Joseph Bois.

Meanwhile epidemics of typhoid fever and dysentery were reported to be sweeping war prison camps in German-occupied France with thousands of French soldiers affected. Some estimates of the number run as high as 800,000.

Italian Plants Bombed

By the United Press

London, Sept. 6.—Striking across the snow-covered Alps on a 1,600-mile raid into Italy, Britain's counterattacking aerial fleet tonight was reported to have heavily bombed the great Italian Fiat airplane factory, leaving it in flames, while other "nighthawks" were blasting German and Dutch objectives.

The air ministry said that at least a dozen big fires broke out, with huge billows of smoke rolling into the night sky.

Despite intense antiaircraft fire, which the pilots reported as much less accurate than that of the Germans, all British planes were said to have returned safely.

Other R. A. F. bombers swept across Germany where widespread attacks were launched against "important military objectives" concealed in German forests and important enemy oil installations, the air ministry said.

"Our bombers started fires in the Hartz Mountains and the Black Forest and bombed the synthetic oil plant at Stettin on the Baltic, tanks at Kiel and refineries at Hamburg and Regensberg on the Danube," a communique said.

British planes bombed the Emden docks, supply yards at Hamm and Soest and a number of German and Dutch airdromes, it was said.

Nazis Launch Heavy Attack

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 6.—German air raiders, spreading their bombs from London and its Thames River outlet all the way to the great shipping port of Liverpool on the west coast, reported leaving a string of smashed industrial plants, their facilities and airdromes today in a great intensification of their air siege of Britain.

Authorized spokesmen said the heaviest attacks were concentrated around London.

Reports said 60 British planes, including 10 on the ground, were destroyed against 14 German losses.

Heavy attacks were reported on Weybridge and Henley, west of London, by two formations of German bombers. At Weybridge, ten planes and a number of hangars were reported destroyed.

In addition to the Henley attack, the agency said, Kenley airport, south of London, and Worcester, in the midlands, were so battered by bombs that their runways were made useless.

The Germans said that at Thames Haven, important oil storage center in Essex, a number of tanks were set ablaze.

Reconnaissance planes hovering over Liverpool reported a gas works, a warehouse, a refrigeration plant and a drydock were hit in the city and a merchant ship struck in the harbor.

Navy Plane Lands Knox in Honolulu

Honolulu, Sept. 6 (AP).—Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, arrived at 5:32 p. m. (11:32 p. m. Eastern standard time) today after a 2,225-mile flight in a naval bomber from San Francisco.

Favorable winds boosted the four-motored craft along at an average speed of 156 knots, and cut the flying time to 14 hours 17 minutes. Secretary Knox came here for fleet maneuvers and to inspect naval bases in the Hawaiian Islands.

D. C. Naval Reservists Go To Sea Today

232 Citizen Sailors To Leave for Two Weeks Secret Training

Off for two weeks' "seagoing training" to parts undisclosed, 232 citizen sailors of the District Naval Reserve Battalion will weigh the anchors of three over-age, 1,200-ton destroyers at noon today in Washington Navy Yard.

The 219 enlisted men and 13 officers, all reservists, will man the U. S. S. Branch, U. S. S. Hunt and U. S. S. Satterlee, commanded, respectively, by Commander D. L. Ryan, Lieut. Comdr. J. B. Hayes and Lieut. Comdr. H. R. Demarest.

The training cruise is the blue water finale to 12 months of faithful but prosaic drilling one night a week at the Navy Yard.

At sea the reservists will run through all the maneuvers of actual battle training from launching torpedoes to boxing aerial targets.

The performance of the Capital sailors, a unit of the 139 Naval Reserve divisions throughout the country, will be closely watched by Navy Department heads. Following the cruise and a minute check-up by an inspection board, the units will be officially classified according to efficiency.

Main Maltese Fort in Ruins, Italians Say

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 6.—British naval movements, apparently keyed to a large-scale plan, were noted in the Mediterranean today as the Italian high command reported a series of aerial attacks on Britain's line of communications from the Gulf of Aden through the Red Sea to Malta.

"Virtual destruction" of Fort Deli Mara, one of the principal defenses of the British stronghold of Malta and bombing for the first time of gasoline depots at Suez was claimed, as well as raids on convoys, troop encampments in the Sudan and truck caravans in Egypt.

Stefani, official news agency, said Italian airmen intensified their careful watch over the Mediterranean because large enemy naval movements, including a considerable fleet of planes on aircraft carriers, had been observed.

Tankers Go Through Strait

The agency surmised that the British plan was to divert Italian attacks while convoys slipped through the sea. Nevertheless, Stefani said, three air attacks have been made on two convoys, causing heavy damage to four freighters, and another on the harbor at Aden in which other ships were hit.

Algeciras, Spain, however, reported nine merchantmen, including three oil tankers under British convoy, had passed westward through the Strait of Gibraltar, presumably en route to England.

Alexandria dispatches also said the British Western Mediterranean Fleet had steamed past the tip of Italy and joined the Eastern Fleet. British planes continued their nightly raiding of northern Italian industrial centers.

The high command said damage primarily was to private dwellings at Turin and San Paolo. Several railway cars were admitted to have been set afire, however.

Gayda Warns of "Sacrifice"

Rome, Sept. 6.—"The Axis powers still have many and hard sacrifices before them," Virginio Gayda, Premier Mussolini's mouthpiece warned today in an editorial.

"One has no right to speak of the postponement or the failure of this or that German or Italian offensive action," Gayda wrote, "for the simple reason that the German and the Italian commands never fix dates from which it would be legitimate to draw conclusions and judgments.

"All actions foreseen as necessary for victory will come with mathematical certainty at the proper moment and without warning. One cannot set a time limit because now time is working solely for the benefit of the Axis powers."

In another editorial Gayda refers to the possibility of Canada acquiring American tanks for training purposes.

"It would be vain to expect Italy and Germany to protest against these cessions of arms," he wrote, "they are merely observing with interest these singular bargains. It is obvious that the United States is promptly and largely profiting from this situation in accordance with its profound commercial instinct."

British Raid Libya

Cairo, Sept. 6 (AP).—Extensive air attacks against Italian airfields and camps in Libya and East Africa Wednesday were announced by the Royal Air Force last night. Seven Italian planes were believed destroyed on the ground and other damage inflicted, a communique said. The loss of one South African plane in raids on Ethiopia was reported.

Lothian Hears Britain Cheered At War Relief Garden Party

MORE THAN 2,500 persons gathered yesterday at the British Embassy, contributing their dollars to British war relief at the party sponsored by the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Although here and there through the afternoon, someone remarked the contrast between the festive scene in the extensive gardens behind the imposing red brick embassy, and those in England, the war did not cast gloom on the occasion. The guests came away with the feeling of confidence in the outcome that was evident among all their British hosts.

Crowds came and went between the hours of 4 and 7. They enjoyed the gardens where refreshments were served and a program of music and dancing presented and then inspected the rooms of the embassy. They were welcomed by Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the federation; Mrs. John T. Lucker, chairman, and Mrs. LeVerne Beales, co-chairman of the coordinating committee under whose auspices the benefit was arranged.

The British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, who had promised to take time from his duties to greet the guests, was delayed at a conference at the State Department and did not arrive until 6:30. Many of those who had come early remained to see him and express their good wishes for Great Britain.

Mrs. Guy E. Mann brought her little son, Edward Kurp Mann, aged 13 months, and papers, establishing the fact he was a British subject—the youngest at the party. His father was English, she explained, and she of German birth —"but not a Nazi."

THE AMBASSADOR arrived at the party just in time to see an exhibition waltz, presented by the Chace Dancers. As he stood on the veranda, with Mrs. Daniel and the committee chairmen, several couples danced their way up from the lawn to where he stood. He apparently enjoyed their performance and smiled as, the broad sweep of one of the dancers' hands came perilously near being an accidental slap in the face for him.

The Fort Stevens Post Drum and Bugle Corps, whose red and white uniforms harmonized with the striped canopies over the refreshment tables, played as the Amassador and the federation officers went down into the garden to greet guests there. Many not only shook hands with him but also presented cards and notebooks for autographs.

"I feel just like an American baseball star," he remarked at the end of the autograph session.

Some of the guests, watching with eager interest for the Ambassador, earlier in the afternoon, had mistaken Leander McCormick-Goodheart, an attache of the embassy, for him. Mr. McCormick-Goodheart did such able "pinch hitting" that many went away without discovering it was not the Amassador to whom they had talked.

AMONG OTHER MEMBERS of the embassy staff who were present as hosts were the Counselor, N. M. Butler; the Naval Attache, Rear Admiral H. Pott, and Mrs. Pott; Col. R. R. Read and A. C. E. Malcolm, second secretary, who assisted members of the federation committee in arranging details of the party. Mrs. Richard G. Casey, wife of the Minister of Australia, also was present.

Among the guests was Miss Pearl Carruthers, of the World Y. W. C. A., who recently arrived in Washington. Mrs. N. Guy Snyder and her small children, Bruce and Beverley, refugees from London, now living in Bethesda, also attended.

Christopher Bramwell Marries Mrs. O'Donnell at St. Matthew's

Lord Lothian and Members of Embassy Staff Attend Unostentatious Ceremony; Luncheon Follows at Home of Bride's Mother

By Dudley Harmon

Extremely quiet, because of the war, was the wedding yesterday of Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell to Christopher Bramwell, of the British Embassy. The Ambassador, Lord Lothian, and many members of the staff took time out from strenuous schedules to attend. For some weeks now the incredible calmness, courage, and outward cheerfulness of the English diplomats here has amazed admiring Washingtonians, and yesterday was no exception.

The luncheon held afterwards at the home of the bride's stepfather and mother, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Courtney, was a masterpiece of last-minute organization. The couple became engaged only last week, and Mrs. Courtney rushed back from Long Island to entertain in a house which had been closed for several months.

Informality was the keynote both of the ceremony and the luncheon. Lilie Bramwell took a firm stand against even a receiving line, so the guests just mingled about in the living room before drifting into the garden. There small tables were set up and waiters scuttled about with dishes of vegetable salad and creamed lobster.

The bride had no attendants at her wedding, which took place at noon at St. Matthew's Cathedral. The Rev. Wilbur Wheeler officiated in the presence of relatives and close frineds. Mrs. Bramwell wore a fitted suit of brown crepe with a long jacket and pleated skirt. On her shoulder were pinned several small green orchids and she carried an enormous snuff-pocketbook of beaver. Her hat was a tiny little beaver number with a tall quill.

Robert Coe, of the State Department, was best man for Mr. Bramwell—they studied at Oxford together. At the luncheon, Sidney and his men played and in the dining room was an enormous white frosted wedding cake, chunks of which the guests took home to sleep on.

Mrs. Courtney was in gray, with an enormous yellow rose pinned at the front. Her sister, Mrs. T. A. Stolberg, who drove over for Annapolis for the wedding, wore a becoming print.

British Envoy Is Popular Guest

The British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, sat at a table in the garden with Rear dmiral Courtney, who has just been named chief of the Naval Examining Board.

The Air Attache of the British Embassy, Group Capt. Pirie, must have renounced food to devote himself to taking movies of the guests. Every other minute he was glimpsed darting out from behind a tree and kneeling on the grass to get just the right shot.

Many others from the British Embassy were present. Leander McCormick-Goodhart was accompanied by his wife, and Anthony Rumbold was with Mrs. Rumbold, who has just returned from a summer on Cape Cod. Commander Anthony Coleby, John Foster and Angus Malcolm were others of Mrs. Bramwell's colleagues present. Mr. Foster, who has been occupying Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor's house, is looking for new quarters. The three little refugee children he imported and their mother have been temporarily adopted by Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers.

Maj. and Mrs. Horace Smith, who were also present, have a refugee English girl staying with them, just the age of Mrs. Smith's young daughter, Virginia. The two girls are now at camp, but will return shortly to the Smith home on Massachusetts avenue.

Social Notables There Full Force

Mrs. Waggaman Pulver was a guest, wearing a smart black dress with matching hat. For the past few winters she has been living in Southern Pines, and says that the only thing she dreads about being in the city again is having to wear a hat. Mr. Coe and Roberto Mendoza of the Cuban Embassy were at her table.

Other guests included George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol of the State Department; Jack Vietor, who is flying every day as a member of the Air Corps Reserve; Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCauley, Mrs. William T. Mann, Wolcott Waggaman, Robin Pell and Harold Hinton.

Mrs. Courtney is returning to Long Island to look after Mrs. Bramwell's three young children, James Lee, jr., son of her first husband, and Michael and Deidre O'Donnell, son and duaghter of the late Mr. O'Donnell.

The Bramwells are postponing their honeymoon as the bridegroom is very busy at the embassy. But they will take the week-end off, and afterwards will live in a house they just leased on N street in Georgetown.

The bride, who is the daughter of the late Robert B. Roosevelt, attended Holton Arms School and made her debut here in 1926. Mr. Bramwell is the son of Frederick Charles Bramwell, of England, and the late Mrs. Bramwell.

This Chic Gown Leads a 'Double Life'

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

"I want a little drama in my clothes," says Elizabeth Windburn, engaging star of Baileys Cross Roads current play as she strikes a dramatic pose beneath the spreading eagle above. The vibrant young actress believes in clothes with a quiet but commanding air, both on and off stage, especially for anyone with slim, athletic proportions like her own.

The most sensational clothes are the plainest ones, according to Miss Windburn, who believes they are based solely on line and cut. She proves this belief by posing in a frock called "Double Life," simple enough for her assured tastes. This dress can go to very formal affairs as is, or, with its own bolero jacket, to first nights and informal dinner dances.

The leaf applique on the bolero matches the applique circling the dress decolletage. The crisp rayon faille is in a new celadon color (so named for the delicate blue-green porcelain). Price for both jackets and dress is less than $17, a figure of interest to schoolgirls and office toilers who want drama at a price.

Man Is Pursued By Girl Who Is Engaged to Another; Not Yet In Love With Her, He Solicits Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Six weeks ago, almost immediately after coming here, I met a girl who claims to have fallen in love with me—in spite of the fact that she is supposed to get married to another man in the near future. I think a lot of her, but I cannot say that I am in love with her as yet.

I'm the kind of fellow that likes to go with all girls, never with just one. But this girl insists that I go only with her. I am a few years older than she is and I have been around a few places, but I never in my life met a girl like her before.

It would be a tough blow to me if I fell in love with her and she married the other man. I would like to know whether or not she intends to break off with him. I can see his side of it, too. If she threw him overboard for me, at this late date, it would go pretty hard with him—and I don't want to see him get it in the neck, because I've met him and he's a likeable sort.

I would like to play the game fairly, and, after all, I'm not in love with her yet, but she stubbornly insists that I go on seeing her. She has gone with the other man for two years; he loves her; she's promised to marry him, and for the life of me I can't see why she wants me in the picture. Please advise.

Better Escape Clutches Of Ruthless Coquette

DEAR A. B. C.: Supposing you do let yourself fall in love with this girl, you can count on being played for a sucker in the relationship, sooner or later—even though she might give up the other man in favor of you, for the time being. Why am I so sure of this? Because, as the old saying goes, "A leopard can't change his spots;" or, to quote another proverb, "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

Already you've had a significant personal demonstration of her slippery temperament. Write it on your cuff that her bold, unscrupulous "two-timing" treatment of the man she's supposed to marry is merely a sample of the kind of double-dealing you would get from her, in your turn, if ever you pledged your troth to her. Don't fool yourself that she would behave differently toward you, just because—so she leads you to believe—she's so crazy about you.

How grown-ups behave in their affairs of the heart depends almost entirely upon the quality of their nature: upon their sense of decency and fair play, their adherence to high principles of honor, their code of ethics; or, as in the case of this girl, upon the complete absence of such interior criteria of conduct. One person's influence upon another's emotions, for either good or ill, has little power to alter the basic pattern of his already established adult character.

The world had an illustration of what I mean, in the immediately preceding generations, during which it was customary for so-called "high minded" young women to marry wastrel or amoral young men with the warm-hearted intention of "reforming" them—a task which, in nine cases out of ten, they found simply couldn't be done. Nowadays, men and women know better. They know that, "As the twig is bent, so the tree inclines," and that if you cannot respect, nor depend upon, the character of the person "as is," you might as well write him off as a lost cause, so far as his investment value for you is concerned.

Judging from the fast-and-loose game this girl is playing, she is a female prototype of Don Juan or Casanova, who engaged in romantic conquests as a form of sport. If she were capable of deep feeling, she would be even more concerned than you are, lest somebody get badly hurt in this foolish melodrama, which is entirely of her making.

The only person she cares about, really, is herself—which is typical of the cold blooded coquette. You have the measure of her unprincipled selfishness, her irresponsible unconcern for what the morrow may bring, in her stubborn insistence that you keep on seeing her—even while promising you nothing, and even while maneuvering you into the position of deceiving (to no real purpose) a man whom you like and for whom you feel a protective good will.

If you were in her fiance's shoes right now, and knew what you know about the girl, would you think she was worth loving and marrying? Wouldn't you shudder to think how she might lower your self respect, torture your heart and dishonor your name, if ever you were so misguided as to make her your wife? In the light of your knowledge of how she behaves behind her fiance's back, don't you think it advisable to take to your heels away from her, while your heart is still in your keeping? M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Book Tells How To Solve Your Money Trouble

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

There's nothing new about money tangles—they happen in the best of families. But there is plenty new about the budget solutions offered in Eleanor Gale Carroll's new book, "Two for the Money," for it tackles the problems of family finance in a thoroughly modern manner, even makes allowances for slips and backsliding and other human frailties. And does the all but impossible job of making the whole business good reading—in fact, we'll guarantee that you'll have a good time with this book even if you have no money worries (if such thing could be!).

But just hear the provocative titles of some of the chapters: "Dollar Diplomacy," "Your Family, Inc.," "Let the Credit Go," "I Know What I Like." It discusses not only how to spend and save your money, but how to blow it in, how to enjoy a few of the luxuries of life on a peanut income, how and what to do without.

We can't think of anybody who is better equipped to write about making the money go around than Mrs. Carroll. Because she's a lady with a house just like the rest of us, busy about the absorbing job of bringing up two children and making a pleasant home for her editor husband. So she has had plenty of chance to try out all her theories. The only difference between her and most housewives is the high good humor and the jaunty wit she brings to her daily work. But if you've read her other delightful book, "Is There a Baby in the House?" you probably feel as well acquainted with her as do those of us who are lucky enough to be her neighbors and friends.

A WOMAN'S WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

ONLY WOMAN PILOT working for the Government is winsome Blanche Wilcox Noyes, who does the Civil Aeronautic Authority's work of marking the Nation's airways. She's responsible for the signs you see painted on rocks, highways and barn roofs, for the information of pilots. She flies her own plane, which literally is her home. The late Amelia Earhart, her staunch friend since the two ended neck and neck in the first woman's air derby, was responsible for giving feminine fliers this important niche in Government aviation. Four women originally worked on the project, but Mrs. Noyes now carries the load alone.

Blanche Noyes

While the Government furnishes the plans for the program, she needs paint too. Supplies and labor must be furnished by local and State organizations, and part of her work is to address meetings and persuade civic leaders to raise the money. Formerly an actress (she appeared in stock with George Brent and others who later won fame on stage and screen), she still profits by her admirable stage presence at these meetings. Charm, plus a knowledge of paint chemistry and airport rating symbols, usually wins the necessary cooperation.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, dropped in at the Archives Building recently to call on R. D. W. Connor, United States archivist. The guard of whom he inquired the way to Mr. Connor's office apparently was a newcomer; he asked Gen. Marshall to repeat the name, then inquired what Mr. Connor's job was. The general's reply left him more bewildered than ever "Archivist?" he said. "We don't have anything like that around here."

Beauty operators are the country's most class-conscious occupational group. The 1930 census called them "hair dressers" and classed them under "domestic and personal service." Their goal for 1940 was twofold: To be called "cosmetologists" and classed as professionals. Preparatory to the current census, says Dr. Alba M. Edwards, of the Census Bureau, a committee of classification experts weighed the issues long and carefully. The result might be called a split decision. With the barbers, the girls were switched from domestic and personal service to a new class known as "Service, Except Domestic and Protective." And they are now called, not hairdressers or cosmetologists, but beauticians.

First Aid Treatment for Hair Required This Time of Year

By Ida Jean Kain

After sun, sand and sea have had their way with your hair, you are inclined to think good Queen Bess had something in her transformation—and that she very likely switched to it permanently during the dog days!

Hair never looks worse than at summer's end. Instead of being put into condition by all that healthful exposure, it is more likely to be bleached and brittle and sadly in need of reconditioning before your new fall permanent.

It's a little late to say it, but there is such a thing as too much sun where the hair is concerned! It tends to destroy the cystine content of the hair and the result are brittleness and splitting.

Blondes Take Warning

If you are a deliberate blonde, it's always best to protect your hair from the sun's rays. The penalties of exposure are overbleaching, streaking and fading. And if you happen to be a brownette, you have to watch out for your skin to prevent it from taking on the same tones as your hair!

But even with some precautions, most heads of hair are due for first aid treatment by this time of the year. Brushing is more important than ever—it's your most reliable means of restoring the natural lustre. Instead of the regulation 100 strokes daily, boost the number to 300 or make it a rule to brush vigorously for three minutes by the clock.

Wield the brush in an up and out stroke, turning the brush slightly at the end of the stroke to give the hair an extra tug for exercise of the hair roots and stimulation of the scalp. Never use a wire brush. It breaks the hair and irritates the scalp.

Give the hair an extra brushing before you wash it. And when you wash your hair, be careful that the soap is not too strong or the water too hot. Strong alkali solutions and heat cause the hair to break.

Massage Should Follow

Then massage the clean scalp with a cream or a tonic containing some oil. Of course, if the scalp is excessively oily, you should use an astringent tonic before massaging. Apply the tonic or lotion with a bit of cotton, then massage by kneading the scalp with a circular motion, using the soft cushions of the palms. Do not rub the hands over the hair and scalp, or scratch the scalp with the nails.

The hair is nourished by the blood stream and its beauty depends on healthy functioning of the scalp. Both brushing and massage are valuable in stimulating the circulation and improving the condition of the hair.

In washing the hair, rinsing is very important. Every particle of the scalp should be washed out. Brushing and drying in the sun are excellent—it's only long exposure that makes the hair look like sun-dried hay! When you sit under a dryer enough time should be allowed so that the heat can be turned to medium or, preferably, to low, for the intense heat affects the cystine content and causes the hair to break.

Flower Vase Rings

To remove white flower-vase stains from highly polished surfaces cover the stains a minute with a soft cloth wrung out in warm water and ammonia—a tablespoon of household ammonia in 4 cups of warm water. Wipe dry with another soft cloth and rub up with furniture polish applied on a cloth. For best results work as soon as possible after the stains appear.

Announcing Baby

WHY DO YOU keep arguing with Aunt Emma about how to announce your baby's birth? After all, her idea isn't all wet. Plenty of people still love those printed cards illustrated with flying storks or laughing infants that she advocates. Though I do admit the idea has been worked to death. But what does it matter? Down in Monks Corner, where Aunt Emma has lived all her life and where you are now living, people have been following this custom for years. While it's not the best form, in that community as well as others in certain rural sections of many States usage sanctions Aunt Emma's arguments. If your friends, are her friends, and they have followed that mode of announcing births, it won't hurt you to keep in line. However, strictly speaking, printed forms of birth announcements, bought at the stationers or 5 and 10 stores, are everywhere incorrect.

In many cities (with the exception of New York) it is customary and fashionable to send birth announcements to the entire list of friends of both families. It is correct to use a very small card with the baby's name and date of birth (do not include weight) with your own visiting card. You can use a Mr. and Mrs. card instead of just yours, if you prefer. Tie the small card (slightly less than half the size of your own card) with a narrow white ribbon to the upper margin of the larger card.

Also remember, it is perfectly proper to announce births informally by telegrams and telephone. And there's nothing wrong with the grapevine method(word by way of mouth) system.

Home-Canned Peaches a Treat

EVIDENTLY there is going to be many an edible memory of this summer when it is past, judging from the requests for recipes for making pickled peaches and brandied peaches.

Pickled peaches are very flavorsome to serve with meats. The following recipe has been tested in the laboratories of the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

Pickled Peaches

Select 8 pounds of firm white peaches, preferably clingstones. Wash well, remove the thin skin with a sharp knife, and stick 2 cloves into each peach. Cook 2 quarts vinegar, 8 2-inch sticks of cinnamon and 4 pounds sugar together for 10 minutes, or until the sirup is fairly thick. Add the peaches, cook them gently until tender, but not broken, and let stand in the sirup overnight. In the morning drain the sirup from the peaches and pack the fruit into sterilized jars. Boil the sirup rapidly until thick and pour over the peaches in the jars. Seal, and store in a cool place. Allow the pickled peaches to stand several weeks to blend the flavor before serving.

Brandied peaches also seem to be in favor. These are very easy to prepare. A recipe for making them follows:

Brandied Peaches

Select ripe, firm peaches. Weigh them. Rub the fuzz from the peaches with a coarse towel. If the fuzz is very heavy, soak the peaches first for about 15 minutes in a solution of water and soda (1 tablespoon soda to 1 quart of water). Make a thick sirup of equal parts of sugar and water (allow 1 cup of sugar and 1 cup of water for every pound of fruit. Boil the peaches in the sirup for 5 minutes. Place them in sterilized jars. If the sirup is thin add more sugar and boil it until it is heavy. Add to the sirup an equal part of brandy. Pour the sirup over the fruit. Seal the jars.

CASE HISTORY OF Marjorie Jones

ON HOW SHE GOT THE SIMPLEX FLEXIES SHOE HABIT

It all started in the cradle, when Marjorie's mama was looking for a shoe that would protect her darling's foot. She decided on Simplex Flexies because she knew that we'd always have plenty of styles for her to choose from. For example, this year alone we've got forty different styles for boys and girls . . . and 174 different sizes and widths. And she knew that The Hecht Co. wasn't content with just measuring . . . but took the child's weight and balance into consideration . . . and then double-checked with the X-Ray machine.

Children's Shoes, Second Floor, The Hecht Co.

When Marjorie was in the toe-sucking stage . . . her mama put her in a white high shoe, smooth as butter inside, with extra heavy insoles so they'd keep their shape better, a box toe that doesn't dent or break, and the famous Simplex Flexies Health Last. Sizes 2 to 6.

When Marjorie grew to be 6 she developed a mind of her own and asked for Simplex Flexies . . . she liked their barefoot freedom and the snug way they hugged her heel and left plenty of wriggle room for her toes. So her mama got her a smart brown moccasin . . . (like the one sketched) for her to wear to school. Sizes 8 to 12.

When Marjorie started Junior High she was still demanding Simplex Flexies . . . and this time she wanted saddle oxfords because that was what all the girls were wearing . . . just as they are now . . . and just like this. Mama was glad . . . because she thought there was nothing like Simplex Flexies to keep young arches strong, young toes straight. Saddle oxford in sizes 12½ to 3 are

D. C. Police Flayed At Antidraft Rally

Suits Threatened Over Interruption Of All-Night Prayers

Charges of "unlawful conduct" by Washington police and "violation of civil liberties" by city officials were hurled last night at a boisterous mass meeting of 700 anticonscription lobbyists at Turner's Arena.

The crowd, who met to protest the dispersing of an intended all-night prayer meeting of draft bill opponents on Capitol Hill Thursday heard speakers buttress complaints of police violence with the threats of suits in United States courts.

The rally climaxed earlier action of delegates who filed formal complaints against Capitol and Metropolitan police with the Civil Liberties Division of the Department of Justice.

Attorney Astounded

"It must be somewhat astounding" to the Nation, Abraham Isserman, of New York, attorney for the National Federation of Constitutional Liberties, said, "to see the rights of the people violated on the steps of the United States Capitol."

The "police and city officials" responsible for breaking up Thursday's demonstration should "be out there where you people are to hear" charges of their "unlawful conduct," he asserted amid tumultous applause.

Cheers rocked the hall again when Isserman declared the "obscene interruption" of delegates prayers would be the basis of "the suit we are about to file."

Joseph Gleders, of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare, lashed at the conscription bill and called the Fish amendment, which would delay induction of trainees for 60 days, "the cheapest kind of politics."

Sees Draft Move Slowing

The draft move in Congress is "definitely being slowed down," he said, and added the "American people are not so dumb" they will be "fooled" by the amendment which would delay the draft until after the November elections.

After Clinton Clark, colored, who said he represented Louisiana farmers, had declared "We're not going to fight anywhere but here—for our rights," Frank Ingram, of the Workers Alliance, took the stand to call for contributions to support the anticonscription drive.

Several hundred dollars were forthcoming from various groups, including Government departments and a local university.

Numerous telegrams from clergymen hitting at Thursday's incident were presented and several persons in the audience had announcements read urging the defeat of Congressional conscription supporters.

Spokesmen who appeared at the Justice Department hearing included Gelders and the Rev. Owen A. Knox, chairman of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, who also spoke at the rally.

Earlier five delegates arrested for distributing handbills appeared in Judge John P. McMahon's courtroom accompanied by more than 100 sympathizers. Their cases were continued until today.

Last night Capitol police were barring from the grounds all persons without special permits in an effort to avoid a repetition of Thursday's demonstration.

Candidates' Arms Analyzed At Lyceum

Forum Hears Representatives Of 3 Major Parties

Members of the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties last night discussed qualifications of their parties' candidates for the office of President before a group at the Workmen's Circle Lyceum, 1502 Fourteenth street northwest.

Representative Joseph R. Bryson (Democrat), of South Carolina, emphasized the importance of the Nation's having various political parties. He discussed achievements of the New Deal, declaring that "the Republicans are only good copycats this year."

Terming Wendell Willkie "a recognized friend of industry" and "a practical farmer," John H. Lambert, of the Washington Willkie Club, declared that "the Nation now needs a progressive, businesslike Administration." He said that "Wendell Willkie has first-hand technical knowledge of administration."

William A. Toole, a member of the Socialist Party, said that many of the aims of Willkie and Roosevelt are basically similar.

Relief in Washington

With Funds Short, Problem Of Alien Aid Vexes Officials

Question of Whether U. S. Citizens Should Be Provided For First Will Be Discussed at Hearing

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Should relief be granted aliens in the District of Columbia?

This question will be brought up during hearings on the budget for the Board of Public Welfare, according to Commissioner J. Russell Young, under whom the welfare department comes.

"Because relief is so limited, it is my first reaction that we should look out for our own people," Commissioner Young said yesterday. "If any are to be denied, it would seem they should be the people who are not citizens.

"On the other hand," he continued, "there are the humanitarian principles of relief—its purpose to reduce or prevent human suffering On this basis, an alien's need is as great and has as much right to be relieved as that of a citizen."

This question, like all others in the field of public welfare, may be regarded from two points of view, that within an office where regulations are made, and that in the field, where their effect on human lives is seen.

50 Cases Involve Aliens

At present, 50 cases involving aliens are on the relief rolls. These come under the classifications of general public assistance, and aid to dependent children. The acts general public assistance and aid to the blind provide only for citizens, but this restriction does not extend to the others.

Under a provision of the Social Security Board that States must submit a plan of operation in order to receive Federal reimbursement of a portion of grants in aid to dependent children, for old-age assistance, and aid to the blind, no plan may be approved that contains "any citizenship requirement which excludes any citizen of the United States."

This clause makes no exception of aliens. Provision for general public assistance in the District is contained in the annual appropriation act and no mention of citizenship is made there either.

Pursuing the humanitarian angle in investigation of the relief situation as it applied to aliens, it was revealed that most of them had been District residents much longer than many other relief clients.

Of Various Nationalities

One group, excluded from old-age assistance because of the citizenship provision and therefore aided under the general public assistance classification, includes nine persons between the ages of 65 and 70; nine between 71 and 80, and three between 81 and 87. They have lived in the United States from 10 to 60 years. Their nationalities are Italian, Russian, Norwegian, English, Greek and one each, Irish, Scotch and German.

All are barred from WPA jobs, even if physically able to work, by the ruling against aliens there, and all are without other resources.

There are three Chinese, one of whom has been in this country 12 years, another 8 and the third 57 years. They cannot obtain citizenship and therefore are ineligible for any relief other than general public assistance.

Problems of Citizenship

One of the six families where aid to dependent children is given is that of a Russian woman, 51 years old, and her five children. She has been in this country 30 years but is not a citizen. Her children, ranging in age from 14 to 21, are all native born. The two oldest are deaf mutes. In the other families, also, the children are native born. In one, the father is a citizen but his wife has been here only five years and has not filed papers.

In these cases, if it were ruled that aliens could not receive aid, the mother would be excluded and only the children would be eligible for the grants. The question of paying the checks to an alien guardian would then arise and present further complications.

All of the aliens receiving relief are legally in this country and could not be deported, according to Robert E. Bondy, director of Public Welfare. They represent a small proportion of the Capital's alien population of 7,018.

Lack of Time Limit Blamed

They are among the 3,500,000 aliens in the country who, for one reason or another, have not become citizens. Lemuel B. Schofield, special assistant to the Attorney General, in charge of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, has attributed this situation to the fact that no time limit has ever been set for becoming citizens, with the alternative of leaving the United States.

"For the most part," he said, "they are here legally and most of them have been admitted for permanent residence. There can be little doubt that the overwhelming majority of them are decent, loyal, hard-working respectable people from whom this Nation has nothing whatever to fear."

It is with this attitude that the Board of Public Welfare has given the applications of destitute and distressed aliens, long residents of the District, the same consideration for general public assistance as those of other residents in simliar need, says Bondy.

the threshing crew had taken refuge from a drenching rainstorm, when he heard an unearthly noise somewhere from above. They all rushed out, he said, in time to hear a crash in the distance toward the west. Two to five minutes afterward, someone spotted the envelope and Graham caught it before it struck the earth.

Official observers who heard the testimony were convinced the empty envelope caught by Graham had given rise to reports soon after the crash that the stewardess had dropped a note. The envelope contained no writing and was believed to have been caught by an updraft when gasoline in the plane exploded in the crash and blown to where Graham and his companions stood.

Time Established as 2:40 P. M.

Time of the crash was established definitely by two photographs introduced in evidence by James H. Carmichael, vice president in charge of operations, as within a few seconds of 2:40 p. m.

One photograph was of a wrist watch "known to be set for Eastern daylight time," which had stopped at 3:40:25, and a pocket watch, whose missing minute hand was definitely outlined by deposited mud, which had stopped at 2:39. The other photograph was that of a battered alarm clock whose remaining stub of a minute hand showed it had stopped at 2:42.

One after another, 32 Virginia farmers and farmers' wives took the stand and gave doggedly honest, though conflicting versions of what they saw in the last few minutes before American commercial aviation's costliest disaster. All agreed on three things: That a flash of lightning immediately preceded the crash, that a peculiar roaring of about 2 seconds' duration was heard and that the lost plane was flying in the worst rainstorm seen in those parts in years.

H. O. Vincell, a slightly built man with a generous mustache, who lives "2 miles south, I reckon," of Lovettsville, was convinced the ship was struck by lightninng. He was sitting on his porch waiting for a rainstorm to blow down from the north when the plane passed right over his garden, flying very low.

"Worst Rain in 18 Years"

Bishop, in whose field the plane crashed, heard it pass overhead but didn't see it, being in his house out of "the worst rain in 18 years."

Looking from an upstairs window in her home 300 yards from the scene, Mrs. Viola Thompson saw a flash of lightning, heard a clap of thunder, then saw "big balls of fire" rolling across Bishop's field, followed by a flash. She "came downstairs," her husband, Richard Thompson, testified, "ascreaming and ahollering that an airplane had fell." He said he had seen the plane pass between his house and "a big white-oak tree, 60 or 70 feet away."

Scroggins, Carmichael testified, had a total of 11,442 hours' flying time, of which more than 600 hours were on the type of plane which carried him to his death. His copilot, J. Paul Moore, had 6,018 total hours, Carmichael said, of which more than 600 were on the same type of plane.

Luther Harris, vice president of P.-C. A. in charge of maintenance, said the plane was the line's newest and had flown 565.54 of the permitted 600 hours before the crash. It was to have been the next ship to go in the shop for complete overhaul, Harris said, and had flown 54 hours and 13 minutes between its last inspection and the time of leaving Washington before the crash. It was powered with two 1,000-horsepower engines, he said, and carried 24,303 pounds when it left Washington. CAB regulations permit 24,546 pounds, with deicing equipment on the wings.

Fred M. Glass, Washington attorney, is presiding at the inquiry, assisted by Jerome Lederer, director of the Safety Bureau, and members of the CAB staff of technical experts.

Hearings will reopen today at 9:30 a. m. in the auditorium.

Earle Rates Socko With Film Farce, Kaye Band; 'When the Daltons Rode' Is Keith's 'Western'

Douglas-Young Comedy Ribs 'Reds,' Bankers; Sammy Kaye Novelty Is Highly Amusing

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

"HE STAYED FOR BREAKFAST," Columbia picturization of Sidney Howard's adaptation from the French of Michel Duran, screen play by P. J. Wolfson, Michael Fessier and Ernest Vajda, costarring Melvyn Douglas and Loretta Young, with Alan Marshall, Eugene Pallette, Una O'Connor, Curt Bois and Leonid Kinskey. Directed by Alexander Hall. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

Mocking Communists where "Ninotchka" left off. "He Stayed for Breakfast" may not be so "arty," but it's certainly just as funny. And with Sammy Kaye's Orchestra and entertainers taking over the stage, the Earle's new program is the brightest thing this side of the rainbow.

In "He Stayed for Breakfast," an habitue of the Cafe Stalin (Cafe Louis Fifteenth to us bourgeoisie) declares that's he's going back to America where he can be a plain citizen and vote for Roosevelt. A comrade reminds him that it will take five years to become a citizen. "That's all right, he'll still be running," is the reply, a crack in the spirit of fun and quite without partisan guile.

Which is exactly what this new comedy is. It spoofs the abused bankers just as much at is does the proletariat workers. An amusing story from pre-Hitler France, smartly scripted, elegantly produced and played with slippery ease, this Melvyn Douglas-Loretta Young tangle will keep you chuckling from the moment you see Eugene Pallette's little finger.

For it's around that rotund fellow's pinkie that the action of "He Stayed for Breakfast" revolves. Douglas is a disgruntled waiter in a Parisian cafe, doing his talking to hurry along the revolution. Pallette is a paunchy stuffed shirt who has his apertif at the sidewalk cafe because his wife has left him. She's Loretta Young, bored and toying with a successful travel agency.

So Douglas can stand it no longer, watching that pinkie stick out while the banker sips his coffee and brandy. He takes a shot at it, runs for it, winds up in Miss Young's sumptuous apartment, weaves in and out of ineffectual disguises and is suddenly converted to the idea that while there are two kinds of people, the two kinds are male and female.

You've learned too much already. Una O'Connor is a delight as Miss Young's wide-eyed maid, taking more of the footage than she has since somber "Cavalcade." There's a neat little bit with some keen music accompanying Una as she prepares for home that you'll want to watch twice. Alan Marshall is around, too, as a publisher-suitor to rival her alienated husband's hand. Both he and Pallette are superbly at ease in their awkward predicaments.

But Douglas and Miss Young are the pivotal figures and they carry the load lightly. And Miss Young has a couple of gowns that will make the ladies clench, their boyfriends clutch. As we've said, the production is top-drawer, the music particularly amusing and Alexander Hall's direction has what the cognoscenti call "The Lubitsch Touch."

Sammy Kaye and his orchestra drew a terrific first house (five shows a day this week at the Earle), proving to be not only an elegant orchestra, but blessed with fine entertainers and a socko novelty.

"So You Want to Lead a Band" is the novelty and it means what it says. Four potential bandleaders are picked at random from the house, given a baton and told to go to it. It's an involved contest that will last all week, but best of all, it's that rare thing—something different. Kaye chats with the contestants, one or two of whom seemed a trifle too glib at the game, but it's elegant fun for house and contestants.

Then there's a wonderful fellow named Cris Cross, the only ventriloquist-dummy chap that this McCarthy-worshipper has ever seen that can come up to Bergen. He's got a perfectly swell turn. Then there are the Nonchalants, different from all other knockabouters because of their unwilling and talkative member, no less than an inspired comic. The band plays "I'll Never Smile Again," "Oh Helen," "Tough Hombre" and several others.

Altogether, it's an exceptional bill.

Theirs Is an Hilarious Adventure

MELVYN DOUGLAS AND LORETTA YOUNG costarring in "He Stayed for Breakfast," the Earle's merry comedy of a Communist, a maid, a husband with a too-dainty pinkie and a beautiful, bored wife. Eugene Pallette, Una O'Connor and Alan Marshall also are involved in this captivating diversion

'Action' Picture Best When Its Characters Are at Their Worst; 'Gateways to Panama'

"WHEN THE DALTONS RODE," Universal picturization of an original screen play by Harold Shumate, based on "When the Daltons Rode," by Emmett Dalton and Jack Jungmeyer, sr., with Randolph Scott, Kay Francis, Brian Donlevy, George Bancroft, Broderick Crawford, Stuart Erwin, Andy Devine, Frank Albertson, Mary Gordon, Harvey Stephens, Edgar Dearing, Guen Ramsey, Dorothy Grainger, Bob McKenzie, Fay McKenzie and Walter Soderling. Directed by George Marshall. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

Now, take those Dalton boys. They were cards all right, all right. What's more if you don't take 'em now at RKO-Keith's in "When the Daltons Rode," which opened yesterday, you'll probably never get 'em again, because at the end they're all dead. And if they pull any Peter Grimms on you, ignore 'em, 'cause here's an eyewitness that saw 'em stretched out, pop full o' lead.

Yes, "When the Daltons Rode" is one of those bang-bang dramas of days when land-grabbers appropriated what wasn't theirs and caused the victims to embark on careers of crime that frightened even the Indians. The Daltons were that tough. Life was rough and ready in those days and if you wanted to be good, you had to be pretty cautious about it.

Take Randolph Scott and Kay Francis. They're the good people left standing when the shootin's over and two such simple oafs you can't imagine. You know they've got a dull future, just padding around posing.

Those Dalton lads were made of sterner stuff and if they misappropriated their strength into the ways of crime, it's because they were hit first. It gets to be pretty involved checking on who's doing what and why and wondering who the Emmett Dalton was who wrote the story. It's an involved story, too, going in fits and starts and introducing people who weren't Daltons but were thugs anyway. George Bancroft, for instance.

But with Brian Donlevy, Broderick Crawford, Stuart Erwin, Andy Devine and Frank Albertson as the lambs in wolves' clothing, there's bound to be a pack of action. They leap off cliffs onto moving trains, they switch horses in full tilt so fast as to turn a politician green. They roam the roofs of moving railway carriages the way you'd walk down F street. The excitement they create is in direct ratio to the price on their heads—which sheriff's signs indicate is steadily rising. Fact is, by the time the jig's up, they—or their trusty doubles—have given you so much vicarious exercise, that you feel it's unjust to attack them. That's the way these "movies" are. Before you know it, zoom, you're ag'in the law.

Naturally, "When the Daltons Rode" is at its best when the Daltons are at their worst. It's tiresome to have to blame all the ills of the world on the bankers again, as the solemn story does. Andy Devine, as a hired man the boys take along for the ride, attempts to be amusing and Mary Gordon is as blissfully miserable as usual. The rest of the players do just about what any group of adults would do in similar circumstances.

Incidentally, we still like "westerns."

"March of Time's" latest release is the top supporting feature, "Gateways to Panama," a mighty timely discussion which bogs down by getting too fascinated with the horrors of Devil's Island, spending an inordinate amount of time on the evils of France's infamous isle. There's purpose to this, of course, because M. of T. claims that it is through this wretchedly-handled territory that Hitler first will strike at the Americas. They bear down on the fact that the hopeless situation of so many in French Guinea make them ideal fifth columnists. The excess footage expended on the penal colony might better have been used for further development of our bases in the Caribbean.

Walt Disney's "Pluto's Dream-house" is not up to the master's par, but what's one slip out of twenty? The newsreel clippings include the President's second Labor Day address.

New York, Sept. 6.

GEORGE JESSEL, distressed at so many reports that his Lois idyll is terminated, has been escorting his bride to all the public places, as visible proof that the romance still endures. The local representative of a Reno hotel, with complete disregard for these tender displays, phoned the Jessel home. George answered the phone, posed as the butler, and elicited the information that Mrs. Jessel was being offered free accommodations in Reno, in return for her posing for newspaper photos. "I'll tell Mrs. Jessel about this when she comes in," said George. "She's out—holding up the Union Pacific" . . . "A train-robbery?" asked the startled caller . . . "Yes," said George. "Y'know how it is—a young girl with a husband who still can't get that handkerchief off his right hand" . . . "What handkerchief?" Jessel was asked . . . "The one covering the gun," he replied, "when I shot McKinley."

JESSEL

JESSEL NO LONGER considers it a novelty, when observers tell him that his wife is young and pretty. "My mother says I was a beautiful child, also," George now declares. "Ma says I had pretty curls, and looked just like Temple—Shirley Temple" . . . "And do you agree?" one dissenter queried . . . "Yes, I looked like Temple," George assured. "Temple Emanu-el."

ALAN CAMPBELL and Dorothy Parker listened to a group of film actors describe their homes here, and then showed them photos of their farm in Bucks County, Pa. Alan pointed ou the swimming pool, the wells, the new roads and all the improvements being made on the property . . . "It all looks very pretty," Norman Foster stated, "but I don't see all the equipment. What kind of heating system do you use in the winter time?" . . . "Oh, that's very simple," Dorothy informed. "We usé the body heat of the field mice."

KAY FRANCIS is starring in a movie called "Little Men," in which young Richard Nichols is featured. Richard, who is 6 years old, recently appeared as Charles Boyer's son in "All This and Heaven Too" . . . The youngster, therefore, has taken a great deal of direction in the studios and gave one indication of its effect upon him. He told Miss Francis: "Dolls are friends" . . . "Dolls are friends?" repeated the star. "What do you mean, Dickie?" . . . The boy explained: "They don't tell you what to do."

WHEN LILY PONS flew to New York, Andre Kostelanetz and Alma Clayburgh went to the airport to see her off. Just before Lily entered the plane, Andre gave her some sleeping pills. "Swallow them as soon as the plane takes off," he recommended. "They're a new type—geographic pills—guaranteed to keep you asleep for 15 States" . . . "In that case," said Mme. Clayburgh, mindful of Miss Pons' nerves, "I hope those 15 States are consecutive."

ERROL FLYNN has become almost inured to the suggestions that he leave his wife here and return to England to fight . . . Flynn visited Ciro's a few nights ago and, for the first time in many months, he saw Robert Montgomery—who returned from France recently, after working in the ambulance corps there . . . "Hello, Bob," was Flynn's innocent greeting. "Been away?"

"Music Hall of 1910" Brings Favorites to the Capitol Stage

"CAPTAIN CAUTION," United Artists picturization of a screen play by Grover Jones, with Victor Mature, Louise Platt, Leo Carrillo, Bruce Cabot, Robert Barrett, Vivienne Osborne, Miles Mander and Al Brendel. Directed by Richard Wallace. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

Suppose the Capitol Theater suddenly announced a joint personal appearance of Jeannette MacDonald, Bing Crosby, Bergen and McCarthy, Patsy Kelly and the Hartmans. Well, that's about what they're doing, except that their stars are the 1910 equivalents of those mentioned.

Fritzi Scheff, greatest singing star of her day, heads an array of glamorous old-timers who are rocking the Capitol proscenium with applause. Joe E. Howard, as much the master showman as when he wrote "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" and starred in "The Time, the Place, the Girl," sets the audience ablaze with his ragtime numbers, convinced the youngsters that the oldsters really had something when they started songs like "Hello, Mah Baby." Joe Howard may have been younger 20 years ago, but he certainly wasn't handsomer than in his silver-haired 1940 incarnation.

Show-stoppers, too, are Kitty and Fanny Watson, both on the buxom side in curves and humor. In fact, Kitty looks like a purple blimp—but such a comedienne! And she can still shake a wicked foot. Applause and shouts continued so long that Kitty finally had to make a curtain speech.

"I'll Show Those Jitterbugs!"

Marshall Montgomery and his "Lord George" were the Bergen and McCarthy of their day. Right now they're even funnier than Edgar and Charlie used to be in their vaudeville days. "Lord George" gets almightily squiffed, causes no end of humiliation to papa Montgomery.

The Primrose Four, prize warblers of vaudeville days, do harmonizing of the popular songs of the early days of the century. Eddie Horan steps vimfully in his famed double cane dance. Francis and Kennedy lend grace and polish to dances that offer a perfect picture of a top vaudeville team in grandpop's day. Emma Francis' hair is a soft gray, but she's still as pretty and agile as in her soubrette days.

La Scheff, star of the show, is a glittering figure, still slim and golden curled. She sings a group of light operatic airs, climaxing with the drum specialty from "Mlle. Modiste" and her world-famous success, "Kiss Me Again."

The Capitol Rockets provide lovely background for their oldsters' acts with a can-can, cane dance, cakewalk and drum number. One quality stands out constantly in the contrasting acts of the old-time stars—a superb poise and showmanship. When Fritzi Scheff said, "I'll show these jitterbugs!" she might well have been speaking for every other act in the revue.

"Captain Caution" Action-Packed

"Captain Caution," celluloid feature of the Capitol show, is a worthy addition to those charades of adventure currently so much in favor. It shows the adventures of an American sailing ship in the troubled days of 1812, when our friends, the British, were very much annoyed with the upstart United States.

Victore Mature, one of the handsomest and most promising of Hollywood's new crop of leading men, is pitted against the surly villainy of Bruce Cabot, captain of a slave ship. The prize for which they contend is a vixenish young lady named Corunna, played by Louise Platt.

Battles, naval, wordy and pugilistic enliven the action. Victor and Corunna continually trade verbal wallops. Leo Carrillo is abused heartily by his pretty French wife, enacted by Vivienne Osborne. The good American ship, Olive Branch, is embattled with a British warship, rescued by no other than hero Stephen Decatur. There's a later brannigan between the Olive Branch and the kidnaped yacht of a British admiral. Now that we think of it, all of "Captain Caution" is one long series of glorious conflicts of one kind or another. For a cautious man, "Captain Caution" is the fightin'est cuss you ever saw.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 6 (INS).—I was looking over some old photographs and I found one taken with Jackie Cooper—not more than seven years ago, at a premiere. He was then at M-G-M and wore short pants and was about 10 years old. Well, Jackie is a young man now and he's been away from Metro for nearly four years. In the meantime, he has done all right for himself at practically every other studio in town. Come Monday he'll be back at M-G-M—the first time since it was decided he was too old, at the tender age of 14, to continue his acting career. He has the lead in "Fighting Sons" with Bonita Granville and Gene Reynolds at M-G-M, with George Sietz directing the young trio and Frederic Stephani in charge of production.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Speaking of Jackie, it is good news to all of his friends that his mother came through her second operation yesterday morning with flying colors and that he and his stepfather, Charles Bigelow, are much encouraged over her condition.

Republic has settled on Ann Miller for Gene Autry's leading lady in "Melody Ranch." The other day when I was at the Republic Studio all any of them talked about was a leadying lady for Gene Autry's picture. "We'll spend real money," they told me "to get the right gal to play opposite him." Today Ann Miller, who was in their "Hit Parade of 1941," was chosen and this is the first time she will play a dramatic part. Remember how cute Ann was in "You Can't Take It with You" in a comedy role? It is Republic's plan to build her and since the company is doing bigger and better things, you'll find they'll soon have an important stock company signed up. By the way, Ann's engagement to Maurice Weinzelbaum seems to be over. She and John Carroll were twoing at the house of Murphy.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Arline Judge's latest New York escort is Jack Dempsey, no less; Buster Collier is due for a lot of kidding—on account of he is home sick with the mumps; Anthony Quinn and his 2-year-old son, Christopher, are at Cedars of Lebanon, both suffering from a jaw infection; Wesley Ruggles and his bride, the former Marcel Rogez, leave October 1 for a four months' vacation, going to New York and South America; Mrs. Ruby Schinasi entertaining with a farewell party at the El Mirador for her daughter, Bubbles, who leaves Wayne Morris and Hollywood for New York; Liz Whitney gets away on Thursday for Honolulu. She'll be the house guest of Doris Duke Cromwell; John Shelton's divorce becomes final the end of the week in Nevada. Mrs. Shelton, who was formerly Sally Sage, Bette Davis' stand-in, has matrimonial plans; Lois Andrews at Grauman's Chinese with Allan Gordon—by permission of George Jessel; Billy Bakewell and Helen Gilbert doing the fun house at Venice last night.

Jackie Coogan whispered to a friend that he has a date with Betty Grable to take her to dinner; Errol Flynn and Gilbert Roland, Hollywood's expert tennis players, will meet the Eastern tennis team on September 14 and 15; Lee Langdon, bridge expert, opening a bridge club in Beverly Hills. Some of the local expert bridgers accepted his invitation to a cocktail party Saturday. Among them Ria Gable, Gracie Allen, George Burns and Binnie Barnes; Wanda MacKay and Marshall Duffield apparently absorbed in each other at the house of Murphy; Freddie Bartholomew and his new automobile are on the RKO lot every day. The attraction is Ann Gillis, who is in "Little Men".

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 6.

Now that vacationists are twirling 'round Hollywood in waltz and rhumba time, I'd like to give them a few helpful hints as to what we consider our star attractions.

HOPPER

Of course, studios come first. But unless you have a letter from the President or your favorite Senator, you can't get in there.

Our Hollywood Bowl is still tops. You can see the stars in the heavens and the two-legged kind, hear beautiful music for 25 cents.

Ciro's, our creme-de-la-creme cafe, is packed like that proverbial sardine can every Saturday night. There isn't room to faint or fight. Dave Chasen's doesn't advertise, but you'll get one of the best dinners you've ever had, and maybe see W. C. Fields playing checkers with Noel Coward.

There's a quiet garden back of the Ivar House just off Hollywood Boulevard where they have delicious food, and the peace I used to find in England before all this trouble set in. You can lunch or dine amidst orange off a tree. And there's a blue jay who'll swipe a cracker off your table, bury it among the flowers, and come back for more.

Billy Jordan's Bar of Music serves Kern, Gershwin, Berlin, or "Three Blind Mice" played in the groove of the great composers, along with your tall, cool drinks.

At Carder's, grown-ups find a wonderful New England boiled dinner, and children get prizes out of a musical treasure chest for licking their plates clean. At the old Beverly Hills Hotel cocktail lounge, foreign titles are pushing our stars off the stools and they display jewels which make you think of the Tower of London, and the babble of foreign language makes you think of another tower.

Slapsie Maxie's is as funny as its host. Then we have a Stuffed Dog Cafe—two Newfoundlands standing in a brightly lighted window. At the Grace Hayes Lodge you can join with Grace in singing the old ditties. And if you want naughty songs—don't miss Bruz Fletcher at the Ball.

When you get tried of eating, you can gaze at the hand-and-foot-prints in the forecourt of the Chinese Theater, get caught in a rip-tide along the Pacific and be rescued by a lifeguard every whit as handsome as Errol Flynn and just as strong, brush up on your beer-barrel polka at Arthur Murray's, stop for a midnight prayer in our first Spanish mission, and see the ponies run where the surf meets the turf at Del Mar.

You might even strut with the bathing beauties at Venice, then go home, starve a year so you can enter the contest next summer.

And if you're radio minded, we have a radio city all our own, with CBS and NBC just a block apart. On the very spot where the latter stands, movie history was made, because that used to be the old barn where Cecil DeMille made "The Squaw Man," where Pola Negri and Gloria Swanson had their famous cat fight—Gloria loved 'em, Pola loathed 'em, their friends took sides.

During the sunlit hours, all cats were eradicated, but in the still watches of the night, Gloria's pals stalked our back alleys—and have we got alleys!—gathered up all the lonely tabbies, and before sun-up they were dumped inside the studio gates, given fresh milk. By nightfall they were gone, and by morning another batch would arrive. It went on till Gloria was sent by the company to do her future emoting in New York.

And when you arrive you'll be able to dance in the largest hall on the coast—the Palladium, opposite Earl Carroll's, where the girls are beautiful and wear as little as the law will allow. So step right up and make your reservations now, and let your slogan be "I'll meet you in Hollywood."

Health Program Planned For Schoolchildren

With parochial schools opening Monday and public schools September 23, Health Department officials are completing plans and programs for a complete public nursing service for children.

Already children who are to enter school this fall for the first time, and even many who attended in previous years, are being given examinations by Health Department physicians and nurses.

Defects in children, which may hinder their work in school, are soon recognized and corrective measures are undertaken with the cooperation of the parents, teachers, principals and the nursing service.

Last year, which was the first the Health Department entered the parochial schools with nursing service, the nurses held 48 group conferences, and 6,933 individual conferences with principals and teachers.

Some functions of the public health nurse are to help the parents secure a physical examination for the child before he enters school so that defects may be found and corrected before school year begins; to continue examinations during the school year; to aid in procuring assistance for children from other social agencies in order to carry out the doctor's orders, and to instruct parents and children in general health measures in relation to diet, teeth, vision and control of communicable disease.

Rev. Wright Resumes Duties At Douglas Church Tomorrow

Member of a unique ministerial family is the Rev. William F. Wright, new pastor of Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, who will return to his pulpit tomorrow morning after a vacation.

HAROLD

His father, the Rev. J. A. Wright, is a retired clergyman of Delmar, Del.; his eldest son, William J., is an ordained minister of Delta, Pa., and his two sons, Harold and Malcolm, are preparing to resume theological studies at Westminster Seminary, Western Maryland College, Westminster. The students are in the same class.

They constitute the only three generations of ministers in the Methodist Baltimore Conference, of which the Douglas pastor is secretary. He spent part of his vacation compiling minutes of its last session. Before Methodist unification, Mr. Wright was secretary of the Maryland Conference of the then Methodist Protestant Church.

Formerly pastor of the Eutaw Methodist Church of Baltimore, Mr. Wright was appointed on June 10 by the Baltimore Conference to succeed the Rev. Clarence H. Corkran, who went to a West Virginia pulpit after eight years here. He is a native of Delaware, where he studied early in life, later being graduated from Westminster Theological Seminary.

Mrs. Wright has for many years been a leader of Methodist women's work, and was recently urged by the nominating committee of the proposed Women's Society of Christian Service at Douglas Church to serve as it first president. Like other Methodist churches, Douglas is uniting women's activities into one organization.

With the return of Mr. Wright, the vested choir of Douglas Church, directed by Estelle Wentworth, will be back in the choir loft tomorrow. Mrs. Brock Bruton will lead an old-time songfest at 8 p. m. The cleric will preach at 11 a. m. on "Receiving Christ," and at 8 p. m. on "Hidden, He Could Not Be."

The present name of the Douglas Church was first printed in the minutes of the Baltimore Annual Methodist Episcopal Conference in 1885. The first church building on the present site at Eleventh and H streets northeast was a small, red brick structure.

MALCOLM

The present edifice, realized through the generosity of the late John C. Yost, had its first unit completed in 1898, and the auditorium finished in 1907. The late Nathan Cowsill, Douglas member, was contractor for the brick work.

The late President William H. Taft was introduced to delegates at the 127th annual Baltimore Conference in the church in 1911. The final sessions of that conference also were held at Douglas Church in June, 1939.

Many religious leaders have served at Douglas Church. They include the Rev. Pierce Hayes, missionary to China; the Rev. Miss Frances Roberds, missionary to Algeria, and the Revs. Melvin Lederer, Raymond Brown and Charles and George Boss, all now occupying pulpits.

Miss Marguerite Jackman serves as pastor's assistant and young people's work director; Van W. Roberds is president of the board of trustees and teacher of the men's Baraca class; O. O. Thomen, active Methodist Union worker, is current and benevolent treasurer, and W. M. Harvey, finance committee chairman.

Among other leaders are Walter J. Snellings, church school superintendent; Mrs. Elizabeth McKay, president of the Ladies' Aid Society; Mrs. Frank N. Long and Mrs. Mabel Vandegrift, presidents of the foreign and home missionary societies, respectively; Miss Minnie Davis, teacher of the ladies' Philathea class, and Mrs. Daisy Thour, its president.

Working among the younger folk are Mrs. Blanche Halla, Mrs. Frieda Stine and Mrs. Agnes Reisinger, and the Misses Elizabeth Carter and Marie Mackin. George Burton is superintendent of the junior department; Charles Foust, church custodian, and Brock Bruton, secretary of the board of stewards. Warren Wheeler, James Finton, Charles Rich and Mrs. Alice Foust comprise the church school administrative staff.

Music is handled under the direction of Miss Estelle Wentworth. Mrs. Brock Bruton, Mrs. John E. Gross and Mrs. Mildred Dupree. The last named is organist.

This Morning

POVICH

Portrait of a sports writer milling a topic:

Stares at typewriter for ten minutes. Runs hands through hair for no reason and bemoans the lack of a topic. Suddenly thanks Heaven for the Cleveland Indians. Feels a bit ashamed of himself for thinking of the Indians again and wonders if he hasn't been too harsh with them already. Decides not to do another piece on the Indians.

Bums another cigarette, and then a match. Discovers self toying with the idea of one more piece about the Indians and rules it out. Puts Indians out of his mind and looks at the clock for no reason. Is suddenly reminded that he's a summer bachelor, with the family away. Recalls that this morning his towel was still up on the shower rack where he slung it the night before. And 9 quarts of untouched milk in the frigidaire along with all his resolutions. And the uncut lawn disgracing the neighborhood.

Can't get Indians out of his mind and begins to wonder if they don't have some grounds for complaint against Oscar Vitt. Concedes maybe that he is driving 'em nuts with his harrowing indecision. Feels sorry for Vitt but wonders why he didn't resign or assert himself when his ball players squealed to Owner Bradley. Doubts if any other manager would tolerate Vitt's ridiculous situation, and wonders if he needs the dough that bad.

Decides that the popular resentment of the Cleveland club is the most amazing feature of the big league season. Cannot recall any instance in which people have taken the side of the Cleveland players in the controversy with Vitt. Agrees that popular hatred of the Yankees has been softened by bitterness toward the Indians and that this year a Yankee victory would be generally popular for the first time. Takes a long drink of water.

Has an idea that the Indians' troubles are all due to "the Iowa gang" on the club—General Manager Slapnicka, Pitcher Bob Feller and First Baseman Hal Trosky who are neighbors in the tall corn country and don't like Vitt. Wonders why Bradley doesn't crack down on the malcontents and make 'em play ball for Vitt as long as he keeps Vitt as manager. Decides that Bradley is a horrible kind of boss man and doesn't deserve to have a pennant winner.

Tries to guess what will happen when the Yankees move in on Cleveland for a crucial series starting Tuesday. Wonders if the Indians will fold, and has an idea they will. Surmises that if Bob Feller pitches the first game of the series, and loses, the Indians are a gone gang. Wonders if he can pun about the Indians not loving it in September as they do in May. Decides it is a pretty weak gag and gives up on it.

Recalls what Jimmy Foxx said on the radio the other night—if the old Athletics of 1929-30-31 were intact in this year's pennant race they'd be out in front by 20 games, and agrees with him. Reasons that the Indians are leading the league because it's a poor kind of league this year. Scorches index finger trying to get one more drag off that last cigarette.

Secretly thinks he'd like to see the Red Sox come with a rush and take it all, but can't see anything for the Red Sox on account of their pitching. Wonders how much Tom Yawkey would give for Sid Hudson, right away quick, and presumes it would be in six figures. Thinks Yawkey has the best club in either league, outside of the pitching, and that the only club which could win the World Series for the American League against the Reds would be the Yankees.

Looks at the clock and makes mental note that time flies. Suddenly feels tempted to forgive Oscar Vitt for any errors in managing the Indians because he was once hit on the head by one of Walter Johnson's fast balls. Wonders if the first error Vitt made with the Indians was in taking the job after Bradley had booted out a succession of managers for not winning the pennant with a club that didn't figure to win the pennant. Wonders if Vitt wouldn't like to be back at Newark, where the Yankee scouting system would always assure him a winner.

Stares at typewriter and recalls that he never did like those newfangled silent machines. Always did say he wanted his typewriter to talk back to him when he hit a key. Is thus reminded that the Indians no longer talk back to Vitt; they just ignore him, and run to Slapnicka with their troubles. Notes that the clock says it's getting close to the deadline and a column must be written. Decides in any event, not to write a piece about the Indians.

Jacobs May Shelve Idea of Pitting Billy Against Joe Louis; Pastor Charges Foul

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Sept. 6.—Billy Conn, the Pittsburgh Apollo, clinched a shot at the heavyweight title tonight by knocking out veteran Bob Pastor in the thirteenth round after smashing the New Yorker to the floor three times.

Referee Billy Kavanagh tolled the full 10 count over Pastor at 2:54 of the thirteenth session, as Pastor remained on the canvas supported by knees and elbows. It was the second time in his career that he had been kayoed. Only Champion Joe Louis had turned the trick previously.

A smashing left hook to the chin was the blow that felled Bob for the third time, but whistling hooks to the body actually paved the way for this defeat after Pastor seemed to have piled up an almost insurmountable lead in the early rounds.

The bout, held at Madison Square Garden, was scheduled for 15 rounds.

End Begins in Eighth

The beginning of the end came for the former New York football player in the eighth round when Billy landed a savage hook low. This hook doubled Pastor up and caused Referee Kavanagh to call a foul on Conn, the light-heavyweight king, who had been having unexpected difficulties up to this point.

Pastor was still weak when he went out for the ninth, and Billy gave him a beating that was climaxed by Pastor's first trip to the floor as this round neared its end. Pastor was on the canvas at the count of eight when the bell rang, saving him. A left hook to the body had hurt him.

The crowd of 14,448 persons who had contributed at gate of $49,415 realized then that it was just a question of time before Pastor was finished. He was groggy and staggering at the end of the tenth from body punches and head hooks. He was jack-knifed again and again in the eleventh, and floored for the second time in the twelfth after Kavanagh had called another foul on Billy for a low blow.

Seconds Inattentive

This second trip to the canvas found Pastor sprawled through the ropes, out on the ring apron where he was dropped by a hard right to the face. Pastor took the count of nine and came into the ring reeling about on rubber legs until the bell rang.

In the final round Conn was after his man, barraging his body and head until the final knockdown and kayo.

Before Pastor had been struck the first low blow in the eighth round, it had been noticed by newspapermen at the ring that his protective cup had slipped up on his left hip. Pastor's seconds failed to fix the cup during the bout.

The United Press gave Pastor five of the first seven rounds, and registered the fourth even. Conn, upright and attempting to box in old-time Corbett style, was unusually slow in getting started, and there were many who doubted that he ever would have gotten started were it not for the eighth round incident.

Jacobs May Shelve Conn

Although Promoter Mike Jacobs had planned to toss Conn into the ring with Louis at New York in November, in case of victory tonight, Billy-the-Kid was so unimpressive in the first half of the bout that this plan may be given up.

Conn, scaling 174 pounds—just 1 under the light-heavyweight limit—appeared such an easy target against Pastor—himself a small heavy at 180¾ pounds—that a meeting with 205-pound Louis might verge on a massacre.

After the kayo, Pastor was unable to talk for ten minutes as he lay on a rubbing table in his dressing room. Pastor claimed that the punch which finished him "had been a low blow." He declared, "I don't mind being licked, but I like to be licked clean."

Tigers Shell Tribe, Press For A.L. Lead

Cleveland Absorbs Fifth Loss in Row, 10-5, as Newsom Easily Wins 18th

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 6.—The foldup of the Cleveland Indians turned into a panic today as the Detroit Tigers completed their massacre of the American League's best pitching staff, with a thumping 10-to-5 victory that extended the Tribe's losing streak to five straight games.

The hot breath of the Tigers was blowing on the backs of the Indians' necks tonight with Detroit riding in second place, a single game behind the leading Clevelanders. Another game back were the New York Yankees, who lost a chance to stay in second place by a point by losing to Washington.

Big Louie (Buck) Newsom pitched one of his poorest games of the season today in fashioning his eighteenth victory and a Tiger sweep of the three-game series, but the Tiger attack was strong enough to offset his shortcomings.

Milnar Is Goat of Spree

The payoff came in the fifth inning when the Tigers scored four runs on a lone hit. The goat of the blowup was Pitcher Al Milnar, who had relieved Johnny Allen.

Milnar struck out Bruce Campbell and Charley Gehringer, but then walked Hank Greenberg, Rudy York and George Stainback to fill the bases. Billy Sullivan whacked a grounder to First Baseman Roy Bell, who fumbled and recovered, throwing to Milnar, who was on the sack. Umpire Lou Kills called Sullivan safe and the Indians staged a protest meeting around the arbiter.

Greenberg had scored and York, who had reached third on the boot, lumbered home as Milnar continued the argument while still holding the ball.

Tebbetts Scores Two

George Tebbetts then slammed a double off the screen in rightfield to send in two more runs.

As in the previous two games, the Tigers got help from homers. Billy Sullivan belted a four-base hit in the fourth with Stainback on base, and Greenberg hit his twenty-eighth of the season in the eighth with the sacks empty.

Newsom had little at the outset and the Indians scored two runs in the first on a single by Lou Bou-

Champs Held To Eight Hits By Nat Lefty

Walker Clouts Pair Of Homers, Delights 12,000 Ladies' Day Fans at Stadium

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Ken Chase and Gerald Walker stalled the Yankees' pennant rush yesterday and dumped the New York club back into third place with a nicely coordinated performance that lifted the Nats to a 3-to-1 victory.

Twelve thousand whooping Ladies' Day fans saw the Messrs. Chase and Walker combine their respective pitching and hitting talents to the dismay of the Yanks. Their winning formula was simple. Chase held the Yankees tight in the grip of his eight-hit pitching, and Walker, appropriating the Yankees' special thunder, belted 'em into defeat with two home runs into the leftfield bleachers.

For the Yankees it was a painful defeat because out in Detroit the Tigers were licking the Indians and moving within a game of the league lead. Detroit usurped second place and left the Yankees still two games behind the Indians.

Chase Outpitches Ruffing

Chase outpitched Red Ruffing to win his ball game and was striving for a shutout as late as the ninth inning, when the Yankees jammed home their only run, but it was Walker who was the driving force of the Nats' triumph.

The Nats' muscular leftfielder assaulted the Yankees' ace for a home run that sailed far into the leftfield seats to set the Nats up to a 1-0 lead in he first inning, and in the sixth he performed his feat all over again with a similar clout among the left-center bleacherites. They were Walker's twelfth and thirteenth homers of the year.

Harris Is Banished

The Nats operated without Manager Bucky Harris in the last five innings. Harris was ejected from the game by Umpire-in-Chief John Quinn when he made so bold as to shove Quinn ungently on the shoulder in protesting a called ball on Keller in the fifth inning.

The victory was no breeze for

Parker Upset In Five Sets In Nationals

Kramer Wins Great Match; Don McNeill Also in Semifinals; Alice Marble Scores

By Henry McLemore
United Press Sports Writer.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Jackie Kramer, a California youngster whose dad is a railroad engineer, highballed into the semifinal round of the fifty-ninth national tennis championship today with a stirring five-set victory over Frankie Parker, the country's second-ranking player.

The 19-year-old Kramer conquered Parker, 1—6, 6—4, 2—6, 6—3, 6—4, in the best match of the tournament to date, and one which lasted until darkness was settling over the big stadium.

Kramer was preceded into the round of four by the man he will have to meet next—Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, who swept aside Elwood Cooke, of New York, 9—7, 6—0, 4—6, 6—3, with a beautiful display of all-court hitting.

Alice Marble Wins

In the women's department of play two semifinalists were determined. One of them was Alice Marble, the invincible one and defending champion, Miss Marble, scoring when she pleased, brushed out the country's No. 4 player, Helen Bernhard, of New York, 6—2, 6—3. And it was evident to everybody in the stadium that the matchless Californian could have won in love sets had she chosen to extend herself.

Another semifinal place went to Valerie Scott, English internationalist, who conquered one of America's better players, Dorothy Bundy, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3. In a morning match, played before the grounds keepers, Virginia Wolfenden gained the quarter-final round with an easy 6—3, 6—0 win over her sister Californian, Patricia Canning.

Kramer, who stands no better than seventeenth in national ranking, was a decided underdog against Parker, who ranks second only at Bobby Riggs, the national champion. In the first set Parker completely tamed the vicious hitting youngster. He pulled him out of position with beautifully hit shots to the corners, crossed him up with soft dropshots, and capitalized on Kramer's backhand weakness with a vengeance.

Abandons Caution

In the second set, Kramer abandoned all caution and started hitting out. He went for a winner on every swing and Parker, forced on the

Rose Bowl Classic May Be Fixed Series

Plan Brewing to Make Spectacle Annual Game Between Champions Of Big Ten, Pacific Coast

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Football's famed Rose Bowl game may become a New Year's Day spectacle involving the gridiron champions of the Big Ten and the Pacific Coast Conference.

Faculty representatives of the Western Conference will meet tomorrow at the request of Big Ten athletic directors to ballot on the plan for a fixed post season series between the two conferences.

The Big Ten athletic directors approved the proposal August 28, at which time they asked the faculty committee to give it consideration. The Pacific Coast Conference, which now engages in all star track competition with the Big Ten, reportedly has favored the plan for some time.

Six Votes Will Fix It

Approval of the plan—which could make the next bowl game at Pasadena, Calif., on January 1, 1941, a Big Ten-Pacific Coast Conference engagement—would result if six of the ten faculty representatives voted affirmatively. Should there be favorable majority vote, the question would be left open for 60 days. If a protest were lodged by one of the committee within that period another vote would be taken. If none were registered, the plan would stand approved.

The plan reportedly runs along these lines:

(1) At the end of each season the Big Ten team—not necessarily the champion, though it would be the conference winner barring unforeseen developments—would be named by the athletic directors or the faculty men, or both.

(2) The Big Ten team would continue in training and make the trip to the coast during the Christmas holidays.

(3) The receipts going to the Big Ten team would be used toward expenses of the Big Ten commissioner's office and the team's traveling and other expenses, with a portion going to the team's school and the remainder being prorated to other conference schools.

Definite Stand Seen

One of the reasons for general belief here that a definite stand would be taken tomorrow was the presence of Prof. W. B. Owens, of Stanford, chairman of the executive committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and prominent in the affairs of the Pacific Coast Conference, now under supervision of an athletic commissioner. Prof. Owens' presence was expected to give faculty committeemen a chance to inquire, firsthand, into all angles of the problem.

Five Are Suspended At Timonium Track

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Timonium Race Track, Md., Sept. 6.—Involved in a battery case, five horsemen were suspended today in a ruling that overshadowed actual racing. The official announcement of the stewards reported that the group was set down for "practices detrimental to the best interests of the turf" and the specific charge was the use of a battery on the horse Prairie Man before the running of the seventh race yesterday.

The men suspended are: Trainer Basil A. Hall, Trainer James Anderson, Jockey Lynwood Lee, Groom John Moore and Groom Jack L. Rinehart. In addition to the suspension, the badges of the five men were ordered taken up and they are denied the privileges of the course. All horses in their care have been ordered removed from the grounds.

Prairie Man, the horse involved, never started in yesterday's seventh race. The stewards ordered him scratched after a report of a group of track detectives. It was only ac-

Albemarle Beats San Diego, 7 to 5

Albemarle, N. C., Sept. 6 (AP).—Albemarle defeated San Diego, Calif., 7 to 5, today in the American Legion junior baseball championship series, evening the game count at two each. The national title will be decided in tomorrow's game, starting at 3 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Albemarle won today's game in the first inning, scoring six runs on five walks, three hits and an error.

Sam Snead Shoots 65, Leads Scranton Open

Equals Tournament Record to Pace Field On First Day, Scoring Five Under Par; Sinks 60-Foot Putt for an Eagle Three

By the Associated Press

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 6.—Sam Snead slammed himself into the favored spot to grab off top money in the $5,000 Anthracite Open golf tournament today with a sizzling first-round 65, five under par.

The Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., golfer equaled the tournament record of Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., winner of the first Anthracite Open last year, with a 32-33.

Snead was in fine fettle. Some of his drives zoomed 300 yards and his putter was unerring. On the 510-yard fourth hole, he dropped a 60-foot putt for an eagle three. There were four birdies and one bogey on his card.

Tagging Snead a stroke was Felix Serafin, the home pro, and winner of the Hershey (Pa.) Open last year.

Others in the exclusive 60's on the opening of the three-day, 72-hole medal tournament were Al Houghton, Washington, D. C., 33, 35—68; Mike Turnesa, New York, 36, 33—69; Lew Worsham, jr., Bethesda, Md., 34, 35—69, and Terl Johnson, Norristown, Pa., 35, 34—69.

Many of the big name professionals trailed far behind.

Bryon Nelson, the Professional Golf Association champion from Toledo, Ohio, had a 38, 35—73 and Picard a 36, 36—72.

Louise Brough Wins Junior Girls' Net Title

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 6.—Louise Brough, 17, Beverly Hills, Calif., captured the Girls' Junior National Tennis Championship today by defeating Pearl Harland, of Santa Monica, Calif., 6—2, 6—3, in a 40-minute final match at the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Miss Brough succeeds Helen Bernhard, of New York, winner of the title in 1938 and 1939, who is no longer in the junior division.

The second seeded player consistently outdrove Miss Harland to gain the edge. Miss Harland, who upset top favorite Patricia Canning, of Alameda, Calif., yesterday, frequently returned Miss Brough's drives into the net or overdrove the baseline on her returns.

Haynes vs. Babich Today as Athletics Open Series Here

Joe Haynes, forgotten man of the Washington pitching staff, will be unveiled again tomorrow when Manager Bucky Harris will send him to the mound in the opener of a series with the Athletics.

Haynes, troubled with a sore arm for most of the season, has languished in the dugout, unable to break into the Nats' starting corps.

It was to be the regular pitching turn of Sid Hudson today, but in deference to Hudson's Sunday crowd-appeal, he is being reserved for the double header with the A's scheduled tomorrow.

Johnny Babich, shut-out winner over the Yankees in his last start when he broke a string of eight straight Yankee victories, is expected to pitch for the A's today.

Toronto Hurler Reports To Macks September 15

Toronto, Sept. 6 (AP).—Phil (Babe) Marchildon, right-handed pitcher of the Toronto Maple Leafs purchased recently by Connie Mack, will join the Philadelphia club September 15, it was announced today. Montreal officials said other Leafs to go to the Athletics include Pitcher Les McCrabb, Infielders Dario Lodigiani and Bill Lillard, and Outfielder Eric Tipton.

Mrs. Beech, Mrs. Dent, and Jerry Weible Tie in Corby Golf

Threesome Card 69s In 18-Hole Event; Mrs. Stokes Wins Low Gross Prize

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Three of the District's active women golfers who have sliced their handicaps in wholesale lots over the past two years, Mrs. H. J. Beech, Mrs. M. A. Dent and Jerry Weible, tied for the Corby Cup with net 69s in the 18-hole event yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

The playoff for the trophy donated by Mrs. W. S. Corby, past president of the District Women's Golf Association, is scheduled for 9:15 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Beech, with a 13 handicap, will give away one stroke to the other players, who both play to 14 handicaps.

Lowest gross prize of the day, as expected, went to Maryland State and Middle Atlantic Champion Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, of Manor Club, who was out in 42 and back in 41 for an 83, two strokes better than the Manor champion, Mrs. L. G. Fray, who scored 85. Mrs. Stokes scrambled to a five on the par four first hole, dropping a 25-foot putt after flubbing the first two shots. She hit her shots exceptionally well on the second nine, but three sixes ran her score to 41.

Eddie Stevens Aids

Mrs. Beech, who won a trophy tournament in the spring, has cut her handicap from 34 to 13 in less than two years, under the tutelage of Manor Club Assistant Pro Eddie Stevens. Her out nine of 49 was composed of all fives and sixes but coming back she stuck a pair of fours and a three on her card to total 43 and a 92, minus the 13 handicap for a 79.

Mrs. Dent's last victory was the Union Printeroft Interstoinal Golf Association's women's championship at Beaver Dam, while she is also a former Duffer's Cup champion. Mrs. Dent started with a birdie three on the first hole, but took eight on the second. Mrs. Dent came back with threes on the fourth and eighth holes and on the back nine rallied nicely on the closing holes, a three on 16 and four on 17. Her totals were 47-46, 93-14, 79.

Two Bad Holes

Miss Weible, a 19-year-old junior at American University, and one of the better prospects among the young golfers, ran into two bad holes, a big eight on the fifth and a seven on the seventh hole, but otherwise the Kenwood member played consistent golf. She was out in 49 and back in 44 for a 93, minus her 14 handicap for the tying score.

Second low net was also a tie between Mrs. L. G. Fray, Manor, 43-42, 85-5, 80, and Mrs. R. Lester Rose, Congressional, 47-44, 91-11, 80. Mrs. Rose won in the draw. The next net prize was, in keeping with the order of the day, a third tie and Mrs. H. J. Cooper, Kenwood, with 45-44, 89-8, 81, won over Mrs. J. F. Gross, of the host club, with a pair of 45s for a 90, and a nine handicap for 81. Mrs. Cooper's score was third lowest of the day.

Due to the players' handicaps all being within a stroke of each other, there is no favorite in today's play-off. However, Al Treder's Manor pupils have won 80 per cent of the tourneys thus far this season and as Mrs. Beech is a protege of the same golf shop this may be in her favor.

Mrs. H. J. Beech, Manor, 93—13—79.
Mrs. M. A. Dent, Beaver Dam, 93—14—79.
Jerry Weible, Kenwood, 93—14—79.

No Doubt About This Setback as Cooke Bows to McNeill

Kramer Wins Great Match; Don McNeill Also in Semifinals

defensive, lost his rhythm. Kramer was a killer-diller at the net in this set, cutting off Parker's delicate returns and whamming them for winners.

Just as suddenly as he had gotten hot, Kramer cooled off in the third and Parker picked his games to bits with his control and steadiness. But in the fourth the Californian surged again and, riding to the webbing behind deep, stinging, forcing shots, regained the mastery.

The crowd, which was solidly behind the youngster, despaired when Parker, still cool, still unrattled, swept the first three games of the final set. But Kramer hadn't given up. Summoning all his strength he beat back—beat back with daring passing shots down the lines, booming overheads, and a service that all but whistled. Scorning caution, he came into the net behind almost every shot, and, bounding like a cat, roamed from sideline to sideline, stabbing back Parker's best shots for points.

Parker's Swan Song

When Kramer pulled even at 3-3 Parker was done for. He made a dying gasp in the eighth game to level at 4-all, but Kramer swept the last two games with the loss of but 4 points.

McNeill had too many shots for Cooke, who, despite the fact that he played the best game of his career, never was a dangerous factor.

Miss Bundy won the first set from Miss Scott with ease, but after that the English girl's punishing service and severe forehand gave her the upper hand. Miss Scott smartly capitalized on Miss Bundy's slowness of foot, and repeatedly scored with drop shots that Miss Bundy could not have reached on a bicycle.

Dodgers Twice Rout Phillies, 3-0, 14-3

Brooklyn Cuts Idle Reds' Lead to 7 Games; Fitzsimmons Wins Shutout, Though Giving 10 Hits; Medwick's Bat Busy Both Games

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 6.—The Brooklyn Dodgers crept up a full game on the league-leading Cincinnati Reds today—but there's still a full seven games separating the top two teams in the National League.

While the Reds were idle, the Dodgers whipped the Phillies twice today, 3-0 and 14-3.

The first game was a triumph for Freddie Fitzsimmons and Ducky Medwick. While Fitz held the opposition to ten hits, for his fourteenth victory of the season, Ducky clouted his fourteenth homer with two on for all the Brooklyn scoring.

In the second game the Brooks got a total of 18 hits, including home runs by Joe Gallagher and Ducky Medwick as Hugh Casey spun his eighth victory of the season by holding the Phils to ten blows, one of them a homer by Dan Litwhiler. Kirby Higbe and Clyde Smoll were credited with the losses.

Shoun Hurls In 49th Game, Beats Cubs, 6-4

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 6.—Clyde Shoun, making his forty-ninth appearance of the season for the St. Louis Cardinals, seemed overworked today when he pitched in his third consecutive game.

The Chicago Cubs scored once against him in the first inning and three times in the second, but the left-hander then hung up a string of seven zeros as his teammates came back to pound Larry French for a 6 to 4 victory.

Pepper Martin's double with the bases loaded cleared the sacks in the fifth inning, and the Cardinals added a run in each of the three subsequent frames. Terry Moore hit his fourteenth homer of the year in the seventh inning.

Johnny Rigney Hurls 4-Hitter Over Browns

Chisox Win, 6-3; Victory Is 13th For Hurler

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Johnny Rigney pitched the Chicago White Sox to a four-hit, 6-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Browns today in the final game of the series.

Duplicating Eddie Smith's four-hitter last night, Rigney blanked the Browns in every inning except the fourth. In that inning, singles by Rip Radcliff, Wally Judnich and Harlond Clift, a pass and one of three Sox errors gave St. Louis all its runs.

Four singles and three bases on balls off Elden Auker accounted for four Chicago runs in the third. The victory was Rigney's thirteenth against 16 defeats.

Allen Blows Up

Allen blew up in the fourth and Detroit scored three times to take the lead. Following Sullivan's homer, Tebbetts doubled and counted on a line single by Newsom.

The riotous fifth followed, locking up the game for the Tigers.

The Indians struck back for their last two runs in the seventh when Newsom lost control and walked Frank Pytlak and Odell Hale, who batted for Milnar. A single by Weatherly and Chapman's infield out sent the runs across the plate.

With Mike Naymick pitching for the Indians, Detroit scored again in the seventh when Sullivan walked and went around on a single by Tebbetts and Newsom's second safe blow of the afternoon.

The Tigers outhit the Indians, 14 to 9, and made their blows good for 23 bases.

Chase Checks Yankees, Nats Triumph, 3-1

Walker Helps Cause With Two Home Runs; Harris Is Banished

Chase, despite the fact that he was pitching clever four-hit ball through the first seven innings. Three straight singles in the ninth put the tying run on base for the Yankees before the big left-hander could get the side out with the help of a spectacular double play started by Jimmy Bloodworth.

Buddy Rosar opened the ninth for the Yankees with a dribbler to Travis which he beat out for a single, and Charley Keller poked a single to center that moved Rosar to second. Babe Dahlgren contributed the third straight hit, a single to left that scored Rosar and sent Keller to second, and Chase was in a heap of trouble.

Bloodworth to Rescue

The Yankees disdained the conventional sacrifice at this point, and Chase disposed of Crosetti on a long fly ball to Lewis after which Keller took third. Then, with the dangerous Ruffing at bat, Bloodworth stepped happily into the picture for Chase.

Bloodworth took a sharp grounder off Ruffing's bat, raced to second with the ball, beating Dahlgren to the bag on a close play, and from out of position rifled the ball to Sanford for a game-ending double play.

It was back in the fifth inning that Chase actually beat the Yankees. It was then that he turned them back scoreless after they had filled the bases with none out.

The first of two cheap hits in the inning put Rosar on base. He dribbled a single through Chase's legs. On a fourth ball to Charley Keller, Jake Early threw to second base for no reason, and Rosar sprinted to third when the ball sailed into centerfield. Dahlgren grounded down the third-base line and got a single when the ball hit the bag, Rosar holding third. Then, with the bases full, Chase bore down in a grand manner.

He struck out Frankie Crosetti on a sharp-breaking third strike, and when Ruffing grounded into the box Chase tossed the ball to Early for a force play on Crosetti at the plate. He got out of the inning by knocking down Gordon's smash into the box with his knee and scrambled after the ball to make the putout at first base.

Johnston Injured; to Miss Redskin-All-Star Game Tuesday

Injury to Keep Gridder Out of Exhibition Game Against Collegians

More trouble befell the Redskins yesterday as Jimmy Johnston, expected to lend much strength to the weak-side attack this fall, suffered a sprained ankle when he stepped in a hole in a signal drill on the Anacostia Park practice field.

The former University of Washington back, who, along with Wilbur Moore, has been doing exceptional work on reverse plays in practice, is one of the men Coach Ray Flaherty has counted heavily upon to help fill the hole in the Skins' running attack made by the absence of Andy Farkas.

While not thought to be serious, Johnston's injury will keep him out of the exhibition game in Boston Tuesday night against the Eastern College All-Stars, who only Monday night upset the New York Giants, 16-7.

Although his eleven will be playing against nine of the All-Stars who will be with the Brooklyn Dodgers this fall, Flaherty said he didn't care to risk further injury to Johnston by putting him in the line-up. Johnston is the fastest man on the squad and will be ready for the opening game against the Dodgers here September 15. Physicians said they didn't think the ankle would hamper him during the season.

Flaherty sent his squad through a light drill yesterday morning and a skull practice during the afternoon. They'll work again today at 10 a. m. at Anacostia.

The Redskins will leave from Union Station tomorrow at 12 noon for Boston and hold a workout there Monday afternoon.

Rochester's Kodaks Defeat D. C. Ten in Second Round, 1 to 0

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 6.—After drawing a first-round bye, the International Business Machines team, from Washington, lost a heart-breaking 1-to-0 victory to the Kodaks, of Rochester, N. Y., in the second round of Amateur Softball Association championship here.

The victors scored two of their hits and the winning run in the seventh on a single by Tom Castle and George Beane's double.

Only two hits were obtained by Washington off George Suthphen, of Rochester. The Senators had their best chance in the fifth when Robert Plaisted led off with a double and went to third on a wild pitch. The next three batsmen failed to come through.

G. U. Has Abundance Of Football Material

29 of 46 Players on Squad Are Holdovers From 1939 Eleven; Coaches Optimistic Over Team's Chances This Year

By Jack Munhall

Like the old lady who lived in the shoe, Georgetown has so many good football players it doesn't know what to do.

No short of amazing is it when there are enough grid candidates at the Hilltop to make up two complete elevens and leave an impressive looking array to hold down the bench.

This season with a Hagerty-regime record squad of 46 players—29 of whom are 1939 holdovers—Jack Hagerty and Assistants "Mush" Dubofsky and George Murtagh anticipate trouble in separating the wheat from the chaff.

Surprising was it yesterday to hear a theme song at the Hilltop other than "Is I Blue," with Hagerty taking the tenor part and Dubofsky furnishing a resounding bass.

Hagerty, it seems, simply cannot reconcile himself with the unprecedented situation in which there are 16 likely looking candidates for the four backfield positions. Line Coach Dubofsky, less well fortified with material, nevertheless has four good tackles, four good guards and a pair of crack centers.

One Regular End to Work With

All of which leaves End Coach Murtagh in the somewhat embarrassing spot of handling the only department in which the Hoyas can possibly be weak—the flanks. Even there Murtagh will start out with one regular end, Mike Kopcik, who last year was named to one wire service's All-America sophomore eleven; two well-seasoned performers in John Lascari and Art Lemke, and one other 1939 holdover, William Wixted. This analysis excludes any help Murtagh may find from Chris Pavich, star end of the 1939 freshman squad.

Biggest problem in the "uncertainty in numbers" trend at Georgetown appears to be Hagerty's, for returning from last year is the regular backfield intact, and up from the unbeaten freshman aggregation are no less than four very promising youngsters. Moreover, in spring practice several of last season's varsity reserves, particularly Bullet Benny Bulvin, displayed much improved form.

At this early date Hagerty is already toying with one solution, that of having two sets of backfield combinations which he could alternate. The first would consist of last year's regulars, Quarterback Joe McFadden, Halfbacks Jules Koshlap and Lou Ghecas and Fullback Jim Castiglia.

The second quartet, picked as of yesterday, would certainly include triple-threat Sophomore Frank Dornfeld at left half and Junior Classman Lou Falcone at quarterback. The other two members would be chosen from among Bulvin and Sophomores Al Kull, John Barrett and Bill McLaughlin. Kull is an underslung, hard-charging runner of Bulvin's type, while Barrett and McLaughlin are both highly regarded blockers and line plungers.

Doolan to Be Considered

Not even entering into Hagerty's discussion of the backfield problem was the player upon whom much of Georgetown's offense may be planned this season. He is Jack Doolan, the fourth outstanding sophomore backfield prospect and the fastest runner on the entire Georgetown squad. In Doolan, former national interscholastic sprint champion and shifty, smart ball carrier, Hagerty envisions another Joe Mellendick; a climax runner and a good kicker to spearhead Georgetown's widely feared spread formation attack.

Of Doolan Hagerty knows little except what the kid showed as a freshman because he did not participate in spring practice, the time when coaches get a true line on sophomore players-to-be.

He does know, however, that Dolan can carry the mail and also that he has proved in drills since Tuesday's opening practice that he can kick with Georgetown's best punter of last year, Tackle Joe Daniels.

Once the weeding-out process is completed and Hagerty & Co. get a true glimpse of material they admittedly look forward to the best Georgetown football team since Hagerty assumed control in 1932.

Players Deny Protest Rally Against Vitt

Bradley Assures Cleveland Manager Of 'Full Cooperation'

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 6.—To the best knowledge of the baseball public, Oscar Vitt was still boss of the Cleveland Indians tonight and his word was law.

There was no further enlightenment locally on the hotel room meeting of certain Indians here last night, and Manager Vitt was ostensibly running the show from the Cleveland bench in the series finale with the Tigers this afternoon.

Of the players' session, President Alva Bradley said at Cleveland that it was merely a pep meeting and expressed regret that it had received publicity.

Assures Cooperation

Bradley assured Vitt "full cooperation as manager of the club and my support in any action he takes."

Players at the meeting were reported to have made some plans of their own for carrying on the pennant fight, and a spokesman said: "If we have to do it, we'll give the orders ourselves."

Identities of the players at the meeting were not determined, and most members of the squad questioned today claimed either ignorance of the affair or treated it lightly.

Heath Indignant

Outfielder Jeff Heath, however, was indignant.

"There was no meeting of any kind," he said. "You can take my word for it that we are all through with meetings. Somebody is just trying to stir things up."

First Baseman Hal Trosky said it was "absolutely news to me."

Pitcher Harry Eisenstat laughed it off.

"Shucks," he said, "it's getting so every time two or three of us get together, they call it a meeting. I'm afraid even to eat with my roommate for fear somebody will say I'm holding a meeting to undermine somebody."

Manager Oscar Vitt was noncommittal except to say he was "still working for Bradley."

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 6.—There are two different games being played at Forest Hills this week. On the stadium and grand stand courts there is something called tennis and people pay good dough to see it committed by the fierce young experts.

CONSIDINE

The other game is played with a racquet and ball on the outlying courts of the club by a group of superannuaries who emerge with a chatter of rusty joints, each year at this time, to engage in the national veterans tournaments.

With their varicose veins giving off musical twangs and their bluing sockets and parchment legs protruding stiffly from dresses and stove-pipe shorts, the elderly ladies and gentlemen put on a whale of a show that is somehow overlooked in the rush to see the unveiling of a new tennis bum. The gaffers and the old girls may move around like a methuselah jitterbugging, but they give it all they got and risk disintegration on nearly every shot.

There is a legend around Forest Hills, perhaps without foundation, that all umpires and linesmen at the veterans' matches are amateur embalmers, and that the ball boys are internes from St. Swithin's. A "let" is called on all overhead smashes, the legend says, to enable the smasher to walk over to the other court and retrieve his or her shoulder. There is supposed to be a time out between games for the adjusting of trusses and the administering of the adrenalin shots, but no one resents this for the veterans' tournaments are leisurely affairs.

Most of the boys and girls seem to know that they successfully ducked when Father Time swung his sickle at them, and that the only thing that will keep them out of the tournaments in the future will be a mild attack of rigor mortis—which might even possibly improve their backhands.

There was a good bit of muttering among the gray beards of the men's tournament last year when Watson Washburn, a sober-sides attorney who played on the Davis Cup teams of a generation ago, showed up ready to play. Washburn was a stripling of 45 at the time and he won the thing hands down by placing the fuzzy pill here and there and making his elders run for it—debatable ethics in veterans' circles. Washburn is back again this year, and though his serious mein suggests that he was born at an advanced age, he is still regarded as a Johnny-come-lately in the sciatic set. The old boys are playing what amounts to a separate little tournament, and first prize is said to be a dozen Van Buren-for-President buttons.

There is dissension in the veteran women's tournament, too. For one thing the Edna Mae Olivers of this fascinating display of female antiquity object to being called veterans—even though their backhands became creaky back in the days when Dewey was an admiral. They still blush at the mention of Hobson, and instinctively step high when they are hobbling here and there about the court, for fear of stepping on the sweeping skirts of yesteryear's tennis.

But veterans they remain, in the program. This year they posted a modest 40 years as the barrier separating them from the swivel-hipped muscle molls over on the stadium courts. This automatically barred the defending championess, Mrs. Walter M. Blumenthal, the former Baroness Levi, who was the former Maud Rosenbaum. Mrs. Blumenthal isn't eligible this year because she isn't 40 yet.

Ignored, unsung, unwatched and often unhinged, these Galahads of gout, these Rebeccas of rheumatism, go forth to battle each day. The mobs brush past them, on the way from the Scotch troughs to the stadium, but they didn't mind. Not many of them can see to the distant paths, 50 yards away. And the only thing they recognize, in the blur of adjacent faces, as they go about the stately measures of their old mazurkas are the hopeful faces of their heirs, pressed close to the chicken-wire backstop.

Card Eleven May Lose Star Center White

Though not yet officially given up as lost, Johnny White, star center of last season's C. U. football team, will not play this year, according to those conversant with the situation.

White, a senior and only about two credits shy of graduation requirements, is seeking a job and plans to finish college as a part-time student, friends say.

His loss would be the most serious single blow that could befall the Cardinal eleven at this time. A great defensive player and an inspirational leader who had been expected to spark an inexperienced line, White is the only dependable center on the squad.

Only other pivot man with any varsity experience is Moe Schulman, a graduate of Tech High School here. Schulman understudied White last season, but played little because of weakness on pass defense.

It wasannounced yesterday by Coach Dutch Bergman that Jimmy Milks, fleet sophomore end from Washington-Lee High in Ballston, Va., would not return to school. Milks, though lacking polish, had been considered a promising prospect.

'Hardrock' Botts Wins Title for Kavakos

"Hardrock" Botts hurled the Kavakas softball ten to the Northeast championship yesterday as he allowed the Dixie Tavern two hits in setting them down, 2 to 1, on the Sherwood diamond.

Armstrong, Furr to Train Here for Bout

Training camps for Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong and Phil Furr, who clash in a 15-round title match at Griffith Stadium September 23, will be set up here next week, Promoter Joe Turner said yesterday.

Turner said he has a permit from the National Capital Parks to establish a camp for Armstrong at the Brentwood Recreation Center, Fifth and Florida avenue northeast, and that he plans to set up a ring and tent early next week.

Carter Baron, head of the athletic committee of the Variety Club, whose welfare fund will benefit from the championship fight, is to see Tom O'Donnell today as to the possibilities of establishing quarters for Furr at Griffith Farms.

It was at Griffith Farms, five miles out on the Marlboro pike, that Freddie Steele, then middleweight champion, trained for his fight with Hobo Williams in the ball park.

With just two weeks left to whip up interest in the affair, Variety Club members are following up the suggestion made recently by Thomas P. Morgan, of the District Boxing Commission, that local camps be set up as an interest builder.

These youngsters from the Silver Spring Church Baseball League, sponsored by the Silver Spring Community Center, were guests at yesterday's game. From vantage points in boxes along the first-base line, they saw Gerry Walker homer twice as the Nats defeated the Yankees, 3-1.

Pat Ganado, La Touche Carry Top Weight in Foxcatcher

15,000 Fans May Witness Annual Event at Fair Hill Estate of Wm. Dupont

By the Associated Press

Fair Hill, Md., Sept. 6.—E. Q. McVitty's Pat Ganado and F. Ambrose Clark's La Touche, the latter an imported jumper, will pack top weight of 162 pounds in tomorrow's sixth running of the Foxcatcher National Cup Steeplechase.

Weights of 159 pounds were assigned G. H. Bostwick's Cottesmore and Emile Pfizer's Farndale. The latter won the $5,000 race last year.

66 Entries for Card

Sixty-six entries have been received for the four races tomorrow, Racing Secretary Edward J. Brennan said the field was one of the best since racing was inaugurated at the noted jumping course.

Cartermoor, 158; Bagpipe, 155; Fillip II, 150; Coxswain, 148; Sussex, 152; Parama, 155; Our Sailor, 150; Farragut, 149; Castlestown, 150; Top Wave, 150; Bois Chabot, 158; Kellsboro, 155, and Wambaw, 150.

15,000 Fans Expected

The Foxcatcher, for 4-year-olds and upward, and the other chases are expected to attract some 15,000 spectators, most of them from social registers throughout the East.

The course is on the northeastern Maryland estate of William Du Pont, jr.

Farndale and Cottesmore were early favorites with the wagerers, although the top-weighted entries had strong support. Cottesmore drew backing because of his impressive performance at Saratoga, where he was a double stake winner.

WAHOOO alternated in setting and forcing the pace, but weakened from early usage.

Dear Al:

Spinach, the old campaigner and Judy Johnson, the capable woman trainer were given a clean slate yesterday just as they should have been. The old horse had been banned by the track vet for not being in condition to race. Miss Johnson did not like that. On Thursday she took Spinach over the jumps. Yesterday she sent the ancient fellow out on the track with R. Thomas, a heavy exercise boy, in the saddle. Spinach worked on the flat and he worked as if he meant it. He reeled off a half in 0:52 1-5, went three-quarters in 1:20 and a mile in 1:48. The stewards didn't have watches on him, but they were watching. Spinach pulled up sound as a dollar. The only horse to work as good as Spinach for a half here in the past several days was Roman Boy, one of the real speedsters. So old Spinach must have known he had to show something. The stewards had their eyes open yesterday. The press box boys growled when Jockey J. Murray kept striking Mary Hazen over the head after her finish. The filly was a bad last and there was no occasion for the punishment. The ruling popped up and Murray was fined $25. It would have suited me if they had taken him around to Mary Hazen's stall and let her kick him around for a half hour. Russell Oakes and Leeds Reilly, of Charles Town's official family, were visitors. They reported that more than 100 sticks of dynamite were shot off in the Charles Town infield to loosen rock that has been slowing work on the infield steeplechase course. About a sixteenth of a mile of the course has been filled in. According to word reaching here, Jockey Buddy Root has been suspended for 60 days at Wheeling for attempting to bribe Jockey Bletzacker. The latter boy alleged that Root asked him to pull a horse. Root's case has been referred to the West Virginia Racing Commission. So you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Misty Eye has done about everything asked and likes this track. Has a fair running mate in Distant Star and I see no reason for mistakes. Mayfern has given a good account of herself this season and has had a nice rest. Delhi Dan will be a threat if sent postward.

Second race—There is little or no chance that Blue Prelude will see action in this field. However, I'm going to take him in case he wiggles off the also eligible list. Osefree is rather faint hearted but has speed and is dangerous. Unlawful likes a longer route but could take it all.

Third race—War Fort has done everything asked and appears ready to make it two wins in a row. Needs only the right ride. Golden Reel probably needed that last to become accustomed to the course and should go well. Scurry Along for the show end.

Fourth race—Corsica gets in this with feather weight and probably will come from behind to take it all. Lula Khayyam's last was a beaut and she is a beaut. June Date had a good race at Marlboro and is a threat.

Fifth race—Blablah has worked well for this race and should perform in good fashion under the modest weight assignment. Eltonhead won yesterday and probably will be prominent. Roman Boy will go well on a fast track.

Sixth race—Bell Chimes, under 104 pounds, will be right there if allowed to show best effort. Lucky Light seems favored by this brand of company. More Poise for the minor award.

Seventh race—Best Policy is the day's best bet. Needs only to get a share of the racing luck. Square Play and Red Foot for the other money positions.

Eighth race—Blex was an easy winner last out and should come right back in this field. Bynums Run, in present form, is a threat. Dacoiah was kidding in that last.

Best bet—Best Policy.

N. J. Standard Reduces Area Gasoline Price

Tank Car Lots Cut ½ Cent a Gallon in D. C. and 5 States

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 6.—Standard Oil Co. of N. J. will cut by ½ cent a gallon the tank car and tank wagon price for regular and extra-grade gasolines throughout Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, the company announced today.

In New Jersey a general reduction of 6-10 of a cent a gallon was announced in the tank wagon, tank car and fair trade minimum retail prices.

Exceptions to the changes were made for subnormal points.

The reductions were viewed by observers as recognition that present supplies of gasoline are far above normal.

Current supplies of the motor fuel are around 85,000,000 barrels. A year ago they were roughly 74,000,000 barrels.

One competent analyst said the oil industry could get along comfortably with supplies of 60,000,000 barrels of gasoline.

Back of the present huge stocks, according to oil men, was the story of the gradually increasing importance of heating oil.

More and more oil is burning to keep homes warm and to provide fuel for the latest rail and sea giants. But to make this type oil, gasoline must also be made. Thus, while supplies of heating and fuel oil have expanded moderately recently (gains which will soon be eaten into by expanded fall and winter consumption, supplies of gasoline have jumped to unwieldy proportions.

August is traditionally the best gasoline sales month of the year. This year, however, August sales totals were disappointing. Hence the industry is facing winter, when gasoline consumption normally recedes from summer highs, with more than it knows what to do with.

In announcing the price cut, Standard Oil of N. J. said it was due to weakening prices in primary markets.

PUC Approves $10,000,000 Bond Issue by Pepco

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday authorized a $10,000,000 bond issue by the Potomac Electric Power Co. for expansion, improvement and development of the company's power plants and facilities.

A public hearing was held August 28 before the Securities and Exchange Commission and the PUC on the application to issue the bonds. The SEC is expected to issue a similar order permitting the bond issue.

Included in the expansion program is a new 50,000 kilowatt turbo-generator unit. The new bond issue will bring the company's long-term indebtedness to $35,000,000.

Pepco Orders New Generator

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Two Eastern utility systems have ordered turbine-generator equipment totaling 102,000 kilowatts and costing more than $2,000,000, General Electric Co. announced today. Consolidated Gas & Electric Co., of Baltimore, ordered a 52,000-kilowatt unit, and Potomac Electric Power Co., of Washington, D. C., one for 50,000 kilowatts.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 6 (AP).—The wheat market's succession of daily advances was broken today when the temptation to accept profits assured the past three weeks caused prices to slip more than a cent a bushel.

Profit-taking was encouraged not only by the 10 cents advance that has been recorded since the season's lows were established August 16, but also by reports of increasing intensity of the battle over England.

Prices closed near the day's lows, or 1@1¾ cents lower than yesterday, with December 70⅝@71⅛ and December 77@ 77⅞. Corn closed ⅛@⅜ off; September, 63¼@63; December, 58⅞@59. Oats, ⅛@⅜ down. Rye, ⅛@¾ lower, and lard, 10@ 12 lower. Soy beans, however, gained 1¼@1⅝.

As a result of the holding of large supplies off the market, consuming interests' demand for "free" wheat has kept prices of actual grain well over futures quotations. At Kansas City, No. 2 hard was quoted as high as 73½, only 1½ under the loan rate, while No. 2 red brought 69½ here, 1¼ cent under the loan rate for No. 2 red. At Minneapolis, No. 1 dark sold up to 80¼, about 7 cents under the loan rate.

Heaviest bookings of corn to come to Chicago from the country in some time, totaling 266,000 bushels, helped to depress that market, but this was offset by substantial shipping sales, totaling 228,000 bushels. At one time, however, September sold at 63¾, highest since late in July.

Tip to Youthful Job-Hunter: Don't Try to Use 'Influence'

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Economic Commentator

The widespread view on the part of youthful job-hunters that "influence" is needed is an optical illusion. This springs from the unquestioned fact that the job seeker who knows some one who is already employed by a company is aided by superior information as to the timing and quality of openings.

Mr. Rukeyser

Likewise, for reasons of intelligent self-interest, many employers like to get recommendations from their own employes as to available outsiders. They, however, expect such employes to give reliable and objective information and not to be biased by a desire to help a friend.

Thus, if a corporation wants a bookkeeper, the personnel man in a well-managed company will not go to the chief executive and ask him whether he wants to favor a relative or friend. His routine will be to go instead to the more humble employes in the accounting department to ask them if they know any promising young man.

Personnel managers of large and important corporations have told me that they get many of their employes in this manner.

The advantage of this approach instead of the direct approach at the employment window is that the outsider is thus better informed as to the availability of jobs and the nature of the employment. Otherwise, applications may be made at times when there are no vacancies. Where a friend can give the lowdown, the applicant discusses his man-power specifications with more intelligent appreciation of the employer's requirements.

Thus, the correct attitude for the job hunter is not to ask a friend to use his "influence" to help him get a job, but rather to approach the employed acquaintance tactfully and ask him to be a listening post in his organization in order to give a tip as to when there is an opening for a person with the qualifications of the jobseeker.

Where an applicant relies on "influence" instead of competence as the passport to a job, he enters the employment office with two strikes on him.

If he overstresses the fact that he knows an executive, the personnel manager may regard that attitude as a sign of weakness.

The head of a great mail order firm has instructed his staff to keep shy of vendors of merchandise and services who rely on letters of introduction instead of standing on the merits of what they have to sell.

Although the applicant forearmed with inside information as to the needs of the prospective employer is at an advantage, there is no royal road to job hunting. In recently telling his life story, Alfred P. Sloan, jr., head of General Motors Corp., revealed that he was scared stiff when he asked for his first job. There are as many ways to get jobs as there are men. Originality and the creative spirit in job hunting impress employers. The job seekers can face the prospective boss with confidence if he feels he (the applicant) knows something and will be able to give the employer value received for his salary.

From the employer's standpoint, the bright and promising beginner is the biggest bargain in the world today. He may possess great inventive genius, remarkable selling talent, and a capacity for leadership, yet on account of his inexperience he can be hired at minimum wages. Any business that neglects to assume reasonable risks in regularly renewing its personnel with youth and enthusiasm is itself in the processes of decay.

The late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes set an intelligent example in this direction by selecting each year as his secretary that graduate of the Harvard Law School who in his opinion showed the greatest promise. Thus, the jurist deliberately safeguarded himself against mental obsolescence.

Rayon Plants Hard Hit by South's Floods

Output Loss Estimated More than 2,500,000 Pounds in Month

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 6.—Floods cost rayon producers in several Southern areas output losses "upward of 2,500,000 pounds" in August and early September, Rayon Organon, trade publication, estimated today.

Producers continued to meet consumption requirements, the magazine said, despite the tight supply situation.

Deliveries of rayon filament yarn to domestic mills in August increased to 35,400,000 pounds from 32,700,000 in July. At the same time producers' stock of yarn at the end of August declined to 9,300,000 pounds from 11,200,000 at the end of July.

Both production and deliveries of rayon yarn reached a new high record for the first eight months of the year, Organon said.

Shipments during the period expanded to 254,200,000 pounds from 228,100,000 in the comparable period and production jumped to 256,000,000 pounds from 208,000,000.

Rayon stepped into the national defense picture, the magazine declared, when the Navy, in addition to recent rayon orders by the Army, opened bids early this month for 4,000 yards of 36-inch black rayon linings. "While not large, the order nevertheless reflects the interest of the armed forces in rayon as a war material." The publication commented.

N. Y. Reserve Bank Changes Policy on Foreign Deposits

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, at the request of the United States Treasury, has begun to handle deposits directly for the accounts of foreign governments, the bank disclosed today.

It was an innovation in Reserve Bank practice, presumably undertaken as a wartime step to segregate foreign government from other foreign-owned funds and avoid confusion growing out of the freezing of assets of countries invaded by Nazi forces.

Since the reserve system was founded 25 years ago, the New York bank has acted merely as agent for foreign central banks in addition to handling funds of the United States Government and member banks of the system.

Separation of foreign government and central bank deposits, it was pointed out, would end doubt over ownership in event war fortunes split governments and central bank authorities.

England and Canada, heavy buyers of war supplies in this country, were expected to keep large deposits on hand here.

Security Offerings Shrink in Week

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities dried up during the week ended yesterday, totalling only $6,419,350, the smallest volume in three months, Poor's Publishing Co. said today. The total was larger than a year ago, however, when the new securities market was temporarily paralyzed by the outbreak of war.

Municipal financing accounted for most of the week's new issues. Offerings by corporations were negligible.

Heavy Steel Scrap Climbs $1 a Ton

Pittsburgh, Sept. 6 (AP).—The steel scrap market came to life at higher prices today when No. 1 heavy melting scrap sold at $20 a ton, an increase of $1, to a down-river mill. The new range is $19.50 to $20 a ton. Prior to this deal a definitive price was difficult to calculate. Small tonnages were taken locally at prices said to range from $18.25 to $19 a ton.

Near-Capacity Auto Output Expected Soon

Current Week's Total Seen 39,665 Units; Rate Accelerating

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 6.—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today that motorcar production for the current week would total 39,665 cars and trucks, compared with 27,645 last week and 26,865 in this week a year ago.

Predicting near-capacity operations "toward the end of the month," Ward's said that volume would take a major step forward next week "when virtually the entire industry will be on a five-day week under a gathering head of steam."

Pontiac Deliveries Rise

Pontiac, Mich., Sept. 6 (AP).—Pontiac division of General Motors Corporation today reported retail deliveries of new cars for August numbered 10,346, compared with 7,351 in the same period of 1939.

D. U. Bathrick, vice president and general sales manager, said unfilled orders are "more than four times greater than they were on September 1, 1939."

Buick Sales Climb

Flint, Mich., Sept. 6 (AP).—Buick division of General Motors Corporation reported today that its retail sales of new automobiles for the last ten days of August numbered 4,994. In the preceding ten-day period sales were 4,268.

Vultee Aircraft Plan to Increase Capital Approved

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Stockholders of Vultee Aircraft, Inc., an affiliate of the Aviation Corporation, have approved a proposal to increase authorized capitalization to 1,500,000, from 1,000,000, shares in order to permit the company to complete immediately acquisition of the Stinson Aircraft and Barkley-Grow Aircraft divisions of Aviation Manufacturing Corporation, Richard W. Millar announced today.

(Purchase of more facilities by Vultee, observers said, is essentially a shuffling of properties controlled by Aviation Manufacturing Corporation and its parent, the Aviation Corporation. The latter, at present, owns 60 per cent control of Vultee. The deal, however, will give Vultee an entry into the commercial aviation field. Thus far Vultee has made only military planes.)

Unfilled orders of Vultee now are more than $40,000,000 and additional large business is under negotiation. A year ago the company's backlog was less than $1,000,000 and at the end of June this year $14,500,000.

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—August production of open hearth and Bessemer steel ingots represented the third largest monthly tonnage in the history of the industry, the American Iron and Steel Institute said today.

Last month's output of 6,033,037 net tons was only 2 per cent behind the record total of 6,147,783 tons, made in November last year, but was more than 40 per cent greater than August last year, when production was 4,241,994 tons. July tonnage of 5,895,070 tons was 8 per cent under August this year.

The industry operated at 98.72 per cent of capacity last month, against 83.40 in July and 62.62 in August, 1939.

Stocks Stage Mild Reaction on Profit Taking; Utilities Buck Trend While Steels Are Weakest

New York, Sept. 6.—The disposition of professional traders to take profits after five successive sessions of advancing prices, brought about a mild reaction in stocks today, accompanied by irregularity in bonds and a reversal of the upward trend in the wheat market. Interpretations of the European war news were slightly tinged with pessimism, partly because of the intensification of Nazi attacks on the British Isles, and partly because the Rumanian situation appeared to have shifted to the advantage of Italy and the Reich.

Market analysts, however, said that neither foreign nor domestic news cut much of a figure in the day's dealings, and that technical considerations and readjustments accounted fully for hesitancy in some groups and losses in others.

Excepting in the steel division, where declines of a point or more were noted, and even wider swings in some of the high-priced manufacturing descriptions, losses were small. It was noted, moreover, that stability continued to rule in the rail section, while preferred stocks of corporations in many fields provided a feature by rising sharply on small volume and for the most part closing at their tops for the day.

The composite for the 100 stock index was down 0.12 point at the close, a negligible loss considering the aggressive gain of more than 1¾ points in this barometer in the preceding five sessions. Transfers of 709,320 shares represented a big shrinkage from the day before. The independent aircraft group, next to the steels, was weakest, with ten key stocks losing an average of 0.43 point.

Utilities made a good showing with common stocks making fractional gains against the trend of the list and preferreds buoyant. American Water Works first preferred, for example, was ahead 7¾. Rail equipments and stores also held their own while foods were steady. Motors lost a little ground.

While copper shares were resistant their progress on the upside appeared labored although Anaconda, most active issue of the day, added a quarter point on sales of 20,000 shares. Kennecott rose a like amount. International Nickel was off half a point. Early in the session the trade announced that sales of Refined Copper for domestic delivery on Thursday were 113,106 short tons, the largest for any single day in the industry's history. Buying demand was considered fair in local copper markets today considering the record business of the day before.

Several of the aircrafts remained in the most active list, including Boeing, up ⅛ and Curtiss-Wright, down a like amount. Carpenter Steel, Chain Belt and U. S. Smelting made or equaled their 1940 highs. Gillette made a new low for the year. Wright Aero was off 5 and declines of one or more points were noted in American Smelting, Bethlehem Steel, Westinghouse, Steel Common, Great Northern Preferred and Allied Chemical. Special issues ahead a point or so were Monsanto Chemical, Climax Molybdenum, Homestake Mining, General Mills and International Business Machines.

Activity in listed bond market was less pronounced today than in the previous session, but price levels held up well. There was a modest tendency toward profit taking in some of the more speculative rails. In general, however, the list kept moving higher, with foreign bonds again showing largest advances. United States Treasury bonds were firm, and best-grade corporate bonds also reflected further inquiry. Turnover in all bonds was $5,980,000.

In the rail group the better-priced issues of speculative interest held better than cheap reorganization bonds, indicating that investment money also was flowing into that section. The poorer rail prospects were inclined to slide off on realization and week-end selling. The holding company and share privilege groups dipped, owing to their sensitivity to equity changes. Other special groups were mixed, with movements small.

Cotton Futures

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Cotton futures declined 4 to 7 points today while the market talked of an increase in the Government crop estimate due Monday.

Increased hedging was also inspired by the belief Washington will forecast a bigger crop. At the same time speculative support was surprised.

Buying was almost entirely confined to mill price fixing, which in view of the recent big sales of textiles was disappointing.

Trade ideas on the size of the crop range from 11,892,000 bales to 12,560,000. This compares with the Government's August 1 estimate of 11,429,000.

With present huge supplies of the staple a millstone around the neck of the market, observers saw little to relish in a larger than expected crop.

Worth street reported another good day's sales of cloth. Estimates of total turnover ran between 18,000,000 and 20,000,000 yards of print cloths and related items. Prices were up 1-16 to ⅛ cent a yard from the lower levels of a week ago.

Profit-Taking Drops Wheat; Cotton Slips

Major Grain Slumps More Than One Cent; Corn Also Easier

By the Associated Press

Commodities for future delivery ran into opposition yesterday after the improvement of the last several weeks.

Chicago wheat traders cashed some of the 10-cent profit made in the past three weeks of advances and prices declined 1 to 1⅛ cents a bushel. Corn dipped ⅛ to ⅜ of a cent.

Cotton at New York slipped 20 to 35 cents a bale. Some selling was induced by prospects of a higher Government crop estimate due Monday.

Rubber lost as much as 1/10 of a cent a pound, and hides about ¼ cent of recent sharp gains. Cottonseed oil and silk also declined.

Zinc jumped an outside of 45/100 cent a pound in the wake of Thursday's hike in spot metal. Others up included cocoa, sugar and Santos coffee. Wool tops and copper were mixed.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples, based on 1926 as 100, receded to 71.46 from 71.51 Thursday.

Dividend Increased By Allis-Chalmers

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Directors of Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., electrical equipment and machinery concern, today voted a dividend of 50 cents on the common stock, payable September 30 to holders of record September 16. Earlier payments this year were 25 cents each in March and June.

Bank Starts Financing Airplane Purchases

San Francisco, Sept. 6 (AP).—Taking note of a big increase in civilian flying through the national defense program, the Bank of America has begun financing individual purchases of airplanes, on about the same basis as automobiles.

Foreign Markets

London, Sept. 6 (AP).—The securities market stepped ahead again today as traders viewed approvingly Prime Minister Churchill's statement to Commons and reports of continued success in air defense. Kaffirs and British government bonds provided the market with most action. Johannesburg operators were in the market continually for the golds, but holders were reluctant to sell. Gilt-edged issues rose as much as ¼ point. Industrial leaders attracted more support and oils and coppers recorded small general gains. Domestic rails added as much as a point.

Liverpool—Cotton futures declined 6 to 7 points today after early steadiness. Profit-taking was responsible for the setback.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 6 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—Sales were very slow today in the Boston wool market. Users were making some bids at around 68-69 cents, scoured basis, for good French combing length fine territory wools in original bags. Holders were firm at asking prices ranging 67@69 cents, scoured basis. Graded lines of grease and territory wools were very quiet but quotations were being firmly maintained at recently advanced levels.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Sept. 6 (AP).—Dry goods: Most staple prints in the cotton goods section moved in moderate volume at full asking prices today. Narrow triple sheers and pigment taffetas sold in good quantities and business in spun yarn was satisfactory. Demand for women's wear continued brisk in woolen goods. Silk goods prices remained quiet although the market outlook seemed brighter.

9:30, WRC—We've been hearing some wonderous things about Truth or Consequences. It's just like the game you used to play and quite as much fun over the wireless.

11, WJSV—It's midnight in Atlantic City and a Miss America of 1940 has been chosen. Could it be Virginia Howe, of Washington? Anyway, Guy Lombardo promises to let us in on it.

Listen! with Glynn

It may well be that the institution of marriage, like the English joke, is nothing to be laughed at.

But that isn't Haven MacQuarrie's idea at all. He believes that there's a lot of humor connected with everyday marital affairs. So much so that he's gone and created a radio show based on the theory that it will be as much fun for the married contestants as for its listeners throughout the country.

It's to be called the "Marriage Club" and, with MacQuarrie as master of ceremonies, it starts over WJSV and the Columbia network tonight at 7 p. m. Husbands and wives taking part in the programs will have ample chance to get in their gibes at one another's faults, but, at the same time, many of them are expected to get in some serious ideas on the subject of making a go of marriage.

"Marriage Club" will be presented from various cities throughout the country each Saturday—Washington should be on the list at an early date. Local couples of all ages will be eligible to compete for prizes which will amount to more than $100 each time. Participants will be asked to expound on questions ranging from "Should a husband be allowed out one night each week?" to "Is it proper to go through your husband's pockets?" Applause of the studio audiences determines who makes the best answers.

We haven't been filled in yet on whether MacQuarrie has done anything at all to protect the answerers after they've made their wisecracks in the comparative safety of the radio studios.

Contract Bridge

It takes a grown-up sense of humor to defend a hand expertly and then have partner toss it all away on one stumble-bunny at the end.

This is what happened to our friend from Buffalo, Uncle Bing, on today's hand, played during an upstate masters' championship. At a part-score contract, which is just as important at match-point play as a grand slam, Uncle Bing arranged the defense so that John H. Law, of Columbus, who knows how to handle the dummy, would be set two tricks at two hearts. The North player in a feverish last minute fell for an old dodge, really a final resort for declarer, and let the two-heart bid slide home.

Today's Hand

NORTH DEALER

	♠ J 10 7 4 ♡ 6 3 ◇ K 5 2 ♣ K Q 9 4
♠ A 9 8 ♡ A K 5 4 2 ◇ Q ♣ A J 7 3	WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ Q 8 5 3 ♡ 8 7 ◇ 10 9 7 6 ♣ 10 6 5
	♠ K 2 ♡ Q J 10 9 ◇ A J 8 4 3 ♣ 8 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡
2 ♣	Pass	Pass	2 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 2 ◇.

Writes Uncle Bing: "North opened the two of diamonds to the ace in the South hand. South returned the eight of clubs, West's jack losing to North's queen. (A grand play by the declarer, holding A J 7 2, with 10 6 5 on the board, North having bid clubs. At most tables, South returned a diamond at trick two against the same contract of two hearts, which was eventually defeated one trick. The club exit by South at trick two creates a situation which will later defeat the contract by two tricks.)

"North attacked the spade entry on the board by returning the jack; the board's queen, covered by the king, was won by West's ace. West laid down the ace and king of hearts and South played the nine and queen in that order. Law now played for the drop of the adverse hearts by exiting with a small trump, North showing out and South winning with the ten spot.

"South put North in the lead with the two of spades to the ten, and North properly pumped the declarer's trumps by returning the diamond king, West winning the four of hearts.

"West led the set-up nine of spades; South ruffed and pumped the last trump out of the declarer's hand by returning the diamond jack to the five of hearts, leaving this situation:

	♠ 7 ♡ None ◇ None ♣ K 9
♠ None ♡ None ◇ None ♣ A 7 2	WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ 5 ♡ None ◇ None ♣ 10 6
	♠ None ♡ None ◇ 8 4 ♣ 3.

"West exited with the two of clubs, North (believe it or not) ducked, and the ten on the board won. The ace and seven of clubs accounted for the remaining tricks, putting the coldest zero of the season on record!"
